McCORMICK DROPS SUIT TO BALK EX-WIFE'S LEGACY

Your Rich Uncle War Times, War Heroes Death Can't Be Gay A Great Miracle

By Arthur Brisbane

NATIONS and individuals have financial troubles, but not you, Uncle Sam. Secretary Mellon will sell for him, above par, five hundred millions of bonds, bearing 3¾ per cent. interest. Owning more gold than all Europe, paying his war debt nearly a billion a year, Uncle Sam is in "easy circumstances."

IF ONLY he were allowed to remain at ease, not dragged into the League of Nations through the World Court.

That League of Nations, planned for peace, already has a fight of its own.

Britain wanted Germany in the League. Germany was willing. France declared that Poland, Spain and Brazil also should come in, with a full vote, as allies and sympathizers with France. Thus a "Latin bloc" would oppose and outweigh the Anglo-Germanic bloc.

THE DESIRE is to make Uncle Sam line up in the League with Germany and England, against the French bloc. Wouldn't it be more sensible for Uncle Sam to stay over here, pay his debts and mind his own business?

MEN THAT SHOULD know better say our entering the World Court has nothing to do with entering the League of Nations. But in Europe, where they know, all statesmen and newspapers of importance affirm United States entry into the World Court is equivalent to entering the League and imposes on America the obligations of the League.

A NATIONAL COUNCIL for the prevention of war asks children to name the world's twelve greatest heroes. Prizes of $100 for each here are open to pupils in secondary and higher elementary schools, everywhere.

Patriotic for the Prevention of War Council is this. All young people will mention military heroes first. Alexander, Caesar, Napoleon will be in every list. British boys will drag in Wellington. American boys will choose Washington, General Grant, Robert E. Lee. German boys will put Frederick the Great and Von Moltke at the top of the list.

Not one child in ten thousand, without prompting from his elders, would mention Pasteur, who gave his life to science; Galileo, who went to prison and risked torture for the truth, or any of the other real heroes. We

HUB WOMEN INJURED AS TROLLEYS COLLIDE; ONE CAR TELESCOPED

Fifty passengers, including many women, were cut, bruised, shaken up or otherwise injured today at Huntington and Massachusetts avenues when two Elevated trolley cars collided, one car telescoping the front car of a two-car train.

Anna Bristol of No. 434 Centre street, Jamaica Plain, was one of the women injured. She was rushed to the City Hospital in the ambulance of the Back Bay police station.

A second woman injured was Mrs. James B. Steele of No. 52 Astor street, Back Bay. She was badly cut.

WOMEN SHRIEK.

Mrs. Steele was treated in the Chimes Spa on the Huntington avenue corner where two other women, also treated, refused to give their names.

The cars that collided were a Dudley street to Cambridge trolley, proceeding on Massachusetts avenue, and a two-car train bound from Jamaica Plain to the Park street subway.

The Jamaica Plain train was in Huntington avenue, crossing Massa-

'COUNT' FOUND GUILTY OF NEGLECTING SON, 5

"Count" Philippe DeClemacy D'Aubigny, poseur, adventurer of international fame and husband of Mrs. Marion Baumeister DeClemacy, Cambridge show girl, was found guilty today in Middlesex Superior Court of non-support of his five-year-old son, Philippe DeClemacy.

Sentence was deferred until his claims to royalties from inventions from inventions in the U. S. Patent Office can be investigated.

Charges of desertion and abandonment of his son were lodged against him when his trial opened, but the court directed verdicts of not guilty be returned on these because of conflicting dates in the indictment.

Mrs. DeClemacy, residing with her mother in Putnam avenue, Cambridge, was the principal witness

BEDFORD TOWN HALL IS DAMAGED BY FLAMES

In a decidedly distressing manner, fire danced today in the Bedford Town Hall, giving general inconvenience all around and bringing blame by the Republicans on the Democrats and the Democrats on the Republicans—or maybe vice versa.

It was a most inconvenient fire because it was in the town hall where the fire whistle is located, and because the fire whistle that summons the call firemen was cut of order, no call firemen could be summoned that way.

Meanwhile the fire burned.

Downstairs in police headquarters the police might have helped out in the trying situation, but there was nobody in, the police department functioning only at night in Bedford.

There was no government functioning in the Town Hall, because the government functions only at night, too, Bedford being somewhat of a nocturnal township. Undoubtedly the town reading is done at night also, because the public library was a closed book.

Someone finally thought to telephone all the firemen, and eventually the boys of the hook and ladder company appeared on the scene.

The fire caused damage of $5,000. A cigarette is believed to have been the cause.

AUTO TRACKS LEAD TO DEATH SCENE, GIRL IN TERROR OF SUITOR

The "girl in the ballroom gown," whose frozen body was found on the beach at Hull, fled from New York in fear of a suitor who sought the $2,000 she had saved while teaching school in Salem and other cities, the police learned today.

She is believed to be Hrepsima Tutaian, also known as Ruth Totvaian, of No. 229 East Twenty-first street, New York City, who three years ago taught in Salem while living with relatives in Lynn.

Police and county investigating authorities turned to the murder theory without reservation when automobile tracks were discovered leading along the beach at Surfside, past the spot where the body was found and disappearing in soft sand at the place where the dead girl's pocketbook was picked up.

Finding of the automobile tracks led the police to acceptance of the story of Chester Merigold of Nantasket avenue, Surfside, who declared he heard the screams of a woman late Sunday night and also heard an automobile.

"They were no screams of jollity," declared Merigold. "They were screams of terror. They stopped suddenly and I heard no more."

The tracks were discovered by Frank Hammond and Irvin Cowing of Nantasket avenue. The automobile, they showed, emerged on to the

COREY ON TRIAL FOR 'MA' PRICE ROBBERY

Frank Corey, acquitted of the murder of Mrs. May Price at the Hotel Hollis, today went on trial in Suffolk Superior Court on the charge of robbing the woman of $150.

Assistant District Attorney Callahan, in his address to the jury, admitted the case against Corey was based on circumstantial evidence. He said the government would prove that Corey was without money just before the robbery, being compelled to borrow to buy food, but that shortly after the robbery he gave a party at the Boston Tavern and showed several large bills.

The assistant district attorney said the government would show that Corey had been on the sixth floor of the Hotel Hollis at the time of the robbery and also that after he had been arrested Corey denied ever having been in Boston, though, according to the assistant district attorney, he was registered at the Boston Tavern.

FEAR MISSING DEVENS SOLDIER IS DROWNED

Camp Devens, March 9.—The discovery of a gray cap and leather bag on the ice of Plow Mill Pond here today led to the belief that Private Fred O. Lumsden, of the 18th Brigade, a long service veteran, had been drowned.

Private Lumsden was seen in the vicinity of the pond by railroad employes last Thursday night, and as he had previously inquired regarding a short cut to camp over the ice, is thought to have fallen in.

The cap which was found on the ice was identified as his property, and the bag as that loaned Private Lumsden by a comrade. State police, in co-operation with the army authorities, will dynamite the pond as soon as possible in the hope of recovering the body of the soldier, who has been missing since Thursday.

Private Lumsden enlisted in the service long before the World War and had a good record. He arrived here recently from Fort Hayes, Columbus, O.

TWO LIVES SAVED AT EXPLOSION IN SALEM

Salem, March 9.—Two men were rescued from death in flames, and damage estimated at $2,500 was caused when a quantity of paint remover exploded today in the hardware store of L. D. Winer at the corner of Front and Lafayette streets.

The explosion, which rocked the business section, occurred when L. D. Winer, the proprietor, and an employe, Joseph Morneau, were upstairs storing away skis and sleds.

The paint remover, in bottles and cans, was exploded by heat from a stove in which a hot fire had been built. Flaming liquid was scattered to all sides of the store, and when the firemen arrived the interior was ablaze, with the two men marooned upstairs.

The fire department extinguished the blaze in short order, and Winer and Morneau were taken to the street.

The explosion attracted a crowd, and, for a time, it was feared that several adjoining places of business would be ignited.

FREED IN KIDNAPING PLOT AGAINST BEAUTY

Leslie M. Litchfield of Natick in Middlesex Superior Court today was absolved from all guilt in connection with the alleged attempted kidnaping of Mrs. Harry Anderson, a well known beauty of that town.

After all the evidence had been entered in the trial in which Litchfield was charged with impersonating a police officer and breaking and entering with intent to commit abduction, a directed verdict of not guilty in the breaking and entering charge was brought in by the jury at the request of Attorney John Brennan for the defense.

The jury then, after a few minutes deliberation, brought in a not guilty verdict on the charge of impersonating an officer. It was charged that Litchfield and another man broke into the Anderson home the night of February 20.

beach at the end of the State reservation, near the Surfside railroad crossing and at the foot of one end of Sagamore Hill.

Passing along the beach, the automobile probably left it some distance beyond where the body was left. Waves and shifting sands have obliterated the traces beyond where the purse was discovered.

Hunt for the suitor of the former Salem teacher was conducted by the authorities of several cities today.

FEARED SUITOR.

Lynn police sought Harry Agbolan and his wife, now of Roxbury, who were often visited by the Tutvalan girl when she was teaching in Salem. Mrs. Agbolan and the girl formerly taught school together in Armenia, and it is believed that she may know the identity of the missing suitor.

Five weeks ago the girl went to Rochester, N. Y., to visit relatives, the family of Asop C. Kuimjian, a wood carver, at No. 51 Edmunds street in that city. She said she was looking for new employment there because she feared the New York admirer who wished to marry her—for her money, she thought.

She deposited $1,189 in the East Side Savings Bank on the advice of her friends. A bank book on that institution was found in the pocketbook of the girl whose body, clothed in a ballroom dress, was found at Surfside.

SEEK TRACE OF POISON.

A search for evidence of poison, administered to her in the form of medicine, perhaps, was being conducted today.

Several Lynn residents, learning of the finding of the body of "the girl in the ballroom gown," urged the police to spare no efforts in solving the mystery. Mrs. Martha Torosian of No. 4 Fourth street, Lynn, and Dickram Zamirian of No. 19 High street are among those who remembered the Tutalan, or Totvalan, girl well.

"She was very attractive, and some of us tried to arrange a match for her, but she would have nothing to do with the fellows we introduced to her, except in a friendly way," said Mrs. Torosian.

"She had known Mrs. Agbolan since childhood, and had come to this country as a result of the trouble with the Turks in her native land."

TAUGHT IN SALEM.

Harry Agbolan and his brother Manuel are said to be cousins of Miss Totvalan. The former lived at No. 9 Cressy street, Lynn, but moved to Roxbury, where his brother had previously taken a residence.

The girl's name as spelled in Lynn was Totvalan, and this is the name that appeared on papers found on the body. Hull authorities believe her Rochester relatives were unable to make the police understand the correct spelling, since they are recent arrivals in this country and do not speak English well. The name "Hrepsima" means Ruth.

In Salem the Totvalan girl for the most part taught English and other subjects to persons of her own nationality.

"Hrepsima continually expressed great fear for the safety of her savings," said members of the Kuimjian family in Rochester, but they were unable to throw any light on the identity of her suitor.

The girl is thought to have been slain at some point removed from the depot where her body was found and to have been removed there in the automobile.

An autopsy performed by Dr. John A. Peterson was directed largely toward eliminating all other theories of death before removing the vital organs for chemical analysis.

The police turned to the poison hunt because no marks of violence could be seen on the body. The skin on face and hands, however, was scraped severely showing plainly that the body had been dragged.

FINGER PRINTS ON WRIST.

Finger prints on the dead woman's wrist are of the utmost importance in cathoming the mystery and perhaps eventually finding the slayer, according to Chief of Police Reynolds of Hull.

Summer cottages along the shore are being inspected for traces of either a gay party or a love tryst, more especially the latter, which the authorities believe may have prompted the crime.

"It is very likely that poison administered by a man very eager to get rid of the woman may have caused death," said Chief Reynolds.

"There is also the possibility that poison was administered in the guise of medicine, or that some strong medicine resulted in death.

"I do not believe the woman was slain in Hull. We are not yet sure whether or not the body was in the water very long, but pending the autopsy I am inclined to think that the crime, if there was one, may have taken place at the Quincy shore.

"There are no families here of Armenian birth, but at Hough's Neck there are many, I understand. Members of the small foreign colony here, in the vicinity of Tribby street, do not know the dead woman."

NO INQUIRY FOR VICTIM.

Chief Reynolds, while conducting a thorough investigation of murder clues, has not relinquished the idea that the death may have been suicide. Even so, police consider a man involved, perhaps to an incriminating extent.

The theory that the woman's body was not washed ashore as was at first believed, was advanced by Georges A. Downing, Hingham undertaker, to whose undertaking rooms the body was removed after it was discovered.

Downing declared that the appearance of the body did not indicate that it had been in the water any length of time, if at all. He said he was inclined to the belief that the body had never sunk, for two reasons. First, because it was not bloated as bodies that have sunk to the bottom and have been floated and been washed ashore usually are. And second, because the body was almost entirely frozen when found. A body that had been washed ashore would not freeze in that manner, he declared.

Informed of Mr. Downing's observations, Medical Examiner Peterson declared that Downing's theory appeared to be a possible explanation of the mystery.

SMALL PURSE FOUND.

Another incident tending to strengthen the theory that the woman's body was not washed ashore was the discovery of a small purse on the beach some distance from the spot where the body was discovered, containing a one dollar bill and a number of cards, all bearing evidence of having been the property of the dead woman.

The belief is expressed that the purse may have fallen from the clothes of the dead woman as she was dragged over the beach to the spot where she was abandoned.

Later another theory was advanced to the effect that she may have been a passenger on some large coasting steamer, and that an attack may have been made upon her in a stateroom, from which her body may have been buried, in the darkness of night.

After the body had been removed it was learned that two young boys, Harry Berman of Nantasket avenue and Kenneth Falin, a five-year-old youth who lives near Berman, had found a pair of practically new feminine pumps on the beach Sunday afternoon. They had played "catch" with them for some time, but later threw them away near Whitehead station.

But a close examination of her clothing revealed that her legs and feet, as well as her stockings were dry. This led to the possibility that she may have been slain in a struggle at some one of the hundreds of abandoned summer camps which cover the hull peninsula.

ALL OF GILPATRIC'S SHORTAGE IS TRACED

Hartford, March 9 (A.P.).—Every penny of the funds of the First National Bank of Putnam misapplied by G. Harold Gilpatric, former cashier, has been traced, Receiver George M. Coffin declared today. The bank claimed an unexplained shortage of $383,000 when Coffin took charge in August, 1924. When Gilpatric came from Atlanta, where he is serving 15 years for embezzlement, the shortage had been reduced to $150,000. Coffin announced that with Gilpatric's aid every penny of the $150,000 has been accounted for.

chusetts, when the Cambridge-bound car slid into the centre section of the first car.

With the sound of the crash and above it came the screams of terrified women passengers, the jangle of shattered glass and the tearing and rending of steel and wood, startling hundreds of pedestrians as the square and disaster is thrown to thousands within a few minutes.

Officers Munroe and Murray of the Back Bay traffic squad, who were on duty in the square, rushed to the cars and were joined by Police Sergeant Edward J. Sullivan who flashed a call for ambulances from the City Hospital and the Back Bay station.

Fifty passengers, approximately, were in the Cambridge and Jamaica Plain cars, and they were assisted out by policemen and volunteers.

According to passengers on the Cambridge car, the motorman said that when he attempted to stop his car before going through the square, the brakes failed to hold and his trolley slid into the two-car train crossing his rails in front.

Traffic was blocked in the square for some time.

against her husband. She told the court they were married five years ago in Montreal and he had never contributed anything to the child's support.

D'Aubigny, who took that surname after his marriage in Montreal, posed in 1900, according to police, as builder of the Panama Canal.

More than a decade later he completely duped Boston, coming here as a French judge to study American jurisprudence. A delegation appointed by the then Mayor, John F. Fitzgerald, met him and he was feted and honored until the hoax was exposed, police declared.

During the World War he again found his way into the news, this time as a French "general."

The "count" testified he was the inventor of an internationally known typewriter and laid his claim to 216 inventions, many of them, he said, already patented and widely known.

Mrs. DeClemacy testified she found two girls in her husband's apartment in New York and was invited by him to share it with them. She said that her husband told her the girls were his neices.

'Spending Spree' Ban Is Put On by Coolidge

Washington, March 9 (I.N.S.)—President Coolidge repeated his warning to Congress today against embarking upon any "spending spree"; this session.

The President invited Representative Madden (R.), Illinois, chairman of the Appropriations Committee, to breakfast and they had a long conference on government finances.

It was agreed that if Congress is careful in appropriations there will be no deficit because of the $385,000,000 tax cut, but it was also agreed a deficit is likely unless Congress pares appropriations to the bone.

LEASE MAY BAR POSTAL TUBES

To prepare for installation of mail tubes between the postoffice and North and South Stations, for which an appropriation was recently made in Congress, First Assistant Postmaster-General John H. Bartlett is expected in Boston today.

Thomas C. Malhallen and Frank E. McMillan, two other members of the tube commission, will accompany him and be met by Assistant Postmaster Harold N. Hansen and a member of the Chamber of Commerce.

According to local officials there is doubt as to whether the tubes can be placed in the railroad terminals as the leases have almost expired and no new leases have been effected.

Apprehension is felt that the North and South station offices may be closed together with that at Essex street after the proposed tubes have been installed.

A discussion of these problems will be had between the visiting officials and the Chamber of Commerce representative.

TWO ENVOYS TO SEE MISS DE WOLFE WED

Paris, March 9 (I.N.S.).—The marriage of Miss Elsie De Wolfe, American actress and interior decorator, and Sir Charles Mendl of the British Embassy, will take place tomorrow in Paris. There will be but five guests, among whom will be Ambassador Herrick and Lord Crewe, British ambassador.

Miss De Wolf made her stage debut in 1890, and in 1905 abandoned her dramatic career and took up interior decoration.

Sir Charles Mendl was knighted in 1924.

R. I. MAN SHOT IN BAY STATE INN IS DYING

Pawtucket, March 9.—John Boyle, 26, of Manville, is dying in the Memorial Hospital here, victim of a mysterious shooting at the East Blackstone (Mass.) Inn early today.

He was brought to the hospital by two men in an auto. They gave their names as Thomas J. Drew of No. 62 High street, Valley Falls, and Merrell Leach, No. 33 Mowry street, Lonsdale. Boyle is a brother of Motorcycle Patrolman William Boyle of the Cumberland police force.

Boyle's own story of the shooting is very vague. Told to police and doctors in gasping syllables, it was to this effect:

With two companions Boyle went to the Inn shortly after midnight. They had not been there very long when another machine, filled with men, approached.

Boyle started to go into the Inn when he heard a man's voice and saw a man standing at a second-story window of the Inn. He, Boyle, turned to walk out of the Inn when he heard a shot, felt a burning sensation, and fell. Two more shots were fired.

His two companions ran to him, picked him up and placed him in their machine. Then a mad race they covered the 12 miles to Pawtucket and left him at the hospital.

Boyle said he did not know the motive for his being shot, nor who shot him. Rhode Island police are combing the countryside, seeking to obtain a clew to the slaying.

WOMAN UP FOR MAYOR AT SEATTLE POLLS TODAY

Seattle, Wash., March 9 (A.P.).—Voters here today went to the polls to decide whether they want a woman for a mayor. Mrs. Bertha K. Landes, president of the City Council and the city's first woman mayoralty candidate, is opposing Edwin J. Brown, mayor for the last two years.

At the same time the voters may decide they do not want a mayor and approve of a proposal to abolish that office by the substitution of a city manager system. Mrs. Landes became acting mayor during Brown's absence to attend the Democratic National Convention in 1924. She discharged Brown's chief of police and began a complete reorganization of the police department.

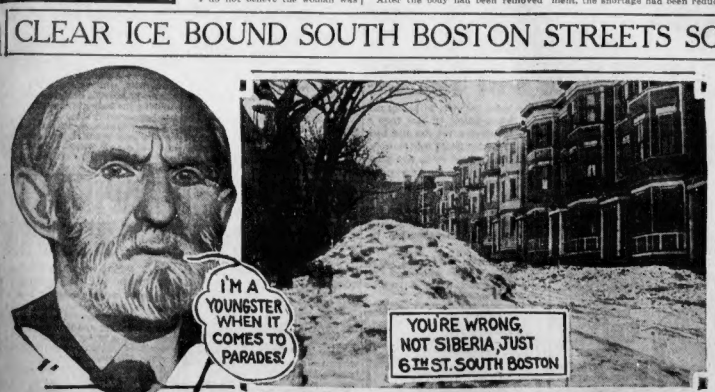
CLEAR ICE BOUND SOUTH BOSTON STREETS SO EVACUATION DAY FOUNDER CAN SEE PARADE



John H. Means, East Sixth street, South Boston, was president of the Dorchester Heights Evacuation Day celebration March 17, 25 years ago.

This year, aged and enfeebled, he gazed from his window and saw Sixth street filled with drifts of ice and snow. He became despondent with the idea he could not see what he believes will be his last parade. Prominent citizens interceded to see his wish to view the procession be gratified.

Parade Marshal Joe Daly has enlisted the youths of South Boston to dig out the Heights, and especially snow-bound Sixth street, on which John H. Means lives, so the parade can pass his window.

Catherine Courtney and Katherine Healy, who live on Sixth street, championed the cause of Mr. Means and are confident they will share with him the pleasure of reviewing the pageant in commemoration of the British quitting Boston.

FIANCEE OF MISSING STUDENT BELIEVES HE IS ALIVE

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN
A HOME PAPER FOR THE PEOPLE WHO THINK
BOSTON, TUESDAY, MARCH 9, 1926

GENERAL NEWS SECTION

DIVINITY STUDENT LEAVES SECOND TIME FOR THE "PORT OF MISSING MEN"

Miss Marjorie E. Stearns of Acton, school teacher fiancee of Arthur D. Davis, missing divinity student, is confident he is alive and is working as a restaurant waiter or taxi driver.

Davis, who disappeared under similar circumstances once before, had $4 when he left the West End Hotel, telling the clerk he was going to the North Station. In the vast crowd at the depot concourse he succeeded in dropping completely from sight.

The young student was pastor of a church at Readville and studying constantly to fit himself for his profession and complained of pains in the head.

At the Newton Theological Institute at Newton Center, where he pursued his ministerial studies, he talked vaguely to fellow students of logging camps and cattle boats. A code letter he sent to his fiancee gave no clue to his ultimate destination.

STRAIN OF STUDY WAS TOO GREAT, SHE SAYS

Translates Code Letter to Show His Going Was Deliberately Planned

The choir at Tremont Temple brought together Marjorie E. Stearns, school teacher in West Acton, and Arthur D. Davis, theological student, of Arlington, now missing, the girl revealed today, as she shed some light on his vanishing.

Waiting confidently and patiently for his return, Miss Stearns declared it as her opinion that he will be found in New York, following his strange disappearance, supposedly because of the strain of over-study.

Although only twenty-one, Davis, her fiance since last Christmas, had a parish to take care of in addition to keeping up his studies and the girl believes the strain of attempting to maintain the standard set by his preacher-father proved too much.

FLIGHT WAS PLANNED.

"His going away was deliberate and premeditated," Miss Stearns said. "He wanted to go away. He told me he had to. I saw him the Sunday night before he went away a week ago and he seemed unusually quiet and despondent.

"He kissed me good-bye and for the first time since our romance began, he cried like a baby. 'I'll miss seeing you week-ends,' he said.

"He couldn't stand it," the girl sobbed. "The strain was too great. His studies, his outside interests, his Readville parish where he preached every Sunday, the standard his folks set up for him—it was more than he could hope to attain successfully to please his parents. He was only 21."

READS HIS LETTER.

"I met him last April 19 when he preached in this town. And then I met him again—the real meeting, when I joined the choir of the Tremont Temple. I then went to the Newton Horace Mann school where I taught the first grade and there we saw each other very frequently. It was a whirlwind courtship and we were engaged last Christmas."

"My own dear sweetheart," she translated the letter which he sent to her the day he left Boston, "I can't go back to Newton and face the school. That's no lie. It breaks my heart to do it, but I can't help it. I must go away. I must, dear. Some day I'll return to you. I'll come back and take you with me. You know I love you, and always will. You'll wait for me, dear, for I'll always be true to you. Say you will. It will break mother's and dad's hearts, but I'm sorry. It can't be helped, and I must go."

BIG VOTE SEEN IN HOT SOUTH BOSTON RACE

Brookline and South Boston represented two extremes in the elections today. In South Boston the voting population was at fever heat over the election of a City Councillor to fill the place of John T. Carr, who died soon after his victory. In Brookline there was little interest as the fight for selectmen was settled in the caucus a month ago.

Seeking Carr's position were the dead councillor's brother, Patrick E. Carr, and also Edward M. Sheehy, Michael J. Mahoney, Leo J. Hallorian, Daniel J. Carroll and Dr. Joseph C. Seymour.

Mahoney was a candidate against John T. Carr, losing by 60 votes.

In Brookline, where it was predicted no more than 2,000 votes would be cast, the only signs of excitement were in Precincts 1, 4, 5, 6 and 9, where there were contests for town meeting members.

The defeat of Mrs. Leslie B. Cutler of Needham was one of the outstanding features of the elections. Mrs Cutler is the wife of Roger W. Cutler, noted Harvard athlete. She was the first woman ever elected selectman in Massachusetts, and a strange feature of her defeat is the fact that the woman vote unseated her.

In Marblehead, Joseph Martin, said to have the backing of the Ku Klux Klan, was defeated for the school board.

HUB'S 'ENOCH ARDEN' WEDS 'Y' GIRL

Alexander Victor Turin, 37, believed to be the man who instituted divorce proceedings against his wife, Princess Nadejda Troubetzkoy of Russia, in Suffolk Superior Court, November 8, 1921, was married in New York to Miss Anna Hearon, 38, musician and Y. M. C. A. worker.

Turin, a native of Georgia, married the Princess Troubetzkoy in Boston, October 31, 1917. He was then a member of the Russian mission, and she said she was with the Red Cross. After the ceremony the couple went to Milwaukee to live. There the princess met Captain Walter Straight Schutz. Her husband went into the American army, and the princess and Captain Schutz were married.

Late in 1920, Captain Schutz instituted annulment proceedings on the grounds the princess was already married. A little later Turin brought divorce proceedings.

Nathan Ullian, Turin's lawyer, asserts as far as he knows the case never came to trial, and that, in 1923, Turin disappeared from Boston, and he has no further knowledge of him.

A statement given out in New York by the Russian proletarian representative of the Red Cross, Commissioner Boulmestrow, at the time of her marriage, declared he had never heard of a Princess Troubetzkoy; she had failed to present her credentials, and he doubted the authenticity of her title.

ADOPT BILL EXCLUDING NEWS REEL CENSORSHIP

Albany, N. Y., March 9 (I.N.S.).—The bill sponsored by Assemblyman Davison, Republican, of Nassau, excluding current news reels from review by the State Motion Picture Censorship Commission, today was sent to the Senate. It was passed in the Lower House by almost a unanimous vote. Its success in the Senate was predicted today by Davison.

The Princess Nadesda Troubetzkoy of Russia, who was married to Alexander Victor Turin, of the Russian Mission, at Boston in 1917. Believing him dead, she married again. When Turin appeared, both husbands sued to have their marital ties severed.

BRIAND AGREES TO LEAD THE FRENCH AGAIN

Paris, March 9 (A.P.).—Aristide Briand today accepted a mandate from President Doumergue to form his ninth cabinet, to succeed the one that fell last Saturday.

Once more M. Briand proved the only leader willing to attempt to lead the country out of the financial bog.

After notifying the president of his acceptance, Briand said:

"In view of the present situation of my country I have told the president that I did not feel I had the right to refuse to attempt the task he did me the great honor to offer me. I will do my best to form a cabinet and hope to give President Doumergue a definite answer this evening."

The veteran statesman was called in after Edouard Herriot, Radical leader, had declined to attempt formation of a "concentration" ministry of the left, and had recommended that Briand be sent back to the league meeting in Geneva with all his former power.

The eighth Briand ministry resigned after failure of a vote of confidence on the sales tax provision of its budget program.

WIFE PREFERS SYRIA TO HIM, SO HUBBY SUES

Because his wife, Jameely, went to Syria in 1913 and has not returned, Dimitri N. Turk, wealthy rug merchant of Gardner street, Allston, today opened suit in Suffolk court for divorce. Mrs. Turk, now residing in Damascus, is fighting the divorce suit. He charges desertion. Turk testified his wife returned to Syria in 1913 with her parents to regain her health. The war broke out and prevented her return until 1918. After the armistice, Turk said, he asked his wife to return, but she replied that she found the climate of Syria more healthful. Judge Donahue allowed counsel for the wife 90 days in which to produce a deposition.

FAWN WED AT '3-DAY PARTY'

Baltimore, March 9 (A.P.).—Events which led to the marriage of Fawn Gray, dancer, and Theodore MacFarland, Philadelphia newspaper man, are being recorded here before an examiner in divorce, behind closed doors.

Miss Gray, whose real name was revealed as Gladys Marie Brown, charges "fraud, misrepresentation, duress and deceit," on MacFarland's part in the performance of a marriage in New York after a three day party, which started in Philadelphia.

She was "in a weak mental and physical state, unable to use her reasoning faculties to know what she was doing," the dancer said.

Fawn Gray gained attention last Fall, when she apparently won the favor of Harry K. Thaw during one of his New York supper club tours.

AIRPLANES TO CHASE RUM RUNNERS

Washington, March 9 (A.P.).—Organization of the nation's first dry air corps was ordered today by Admiral Billard, commandant of the coast guard.

The deficiency appropriation bill just signed by President Coolidge allots $150,000 for establishment of the Coast Guard Air Service. With this fund Admiral Billard plans to establish five bases along the Atlantic Coast from New England to Florida, where patrol boat stations now are located. A plane equipped with a crew of several men will be assigned to each of these places.

Strategic points in the Coast Guard campaign against rum smuggling will be selected and navy type seaplanes will be used. Attention will be given to navigation protection as well as rum fighting.

Additional appropriations will be asked next year, Admiral Billard said, for air bases on the Great Lakes, the Gulf of Mexico and the Pacific Coast, if the new service proves successful.

BETTER SERVICE ON B. & M. ROAD AT NIGHT

Out of town theatre patrons and commuting students in Boston night schools are benefited by improved train service on the Southern Division of the Boston & Maine Railroad. New schedules, to take effect March 15, were announced today by the company.

A fast after-theaters train leaving Boston at 11:30 will arrive at Lowell at 12:08, at Nashua at 12:29 and at Manchester at 12:55. Points nearer to Boston will be served with another fast train leaving Boston at 11:20. For the convenience of night school students the train which has left North Station at 7:05 will be rescheduled to 9:30 and extended through to Lowell.

AMERICAN BANKER WEDS ENGLISH GIRL ABROAD

London, March 9 (A.P.).—Commodore Louis Beaumont, American banker, merchant and philanthropist, living in Paris, was married to Miss Helen Nera Thomas of London in the Prince's row registry office today. His wedding gift to the bride was a pearl necklace valued at $125,000.

HOW IRVIN G. AND ELLIN WOULD EXPLOIT ROMANCE IF THEY FALL FOR THE LURE OF THE FILMS

An enterprising movie agent is making efforts to sign up Irving Berlin and the former Ellin Mackay in the films. Here's how she would appear in the role of tramp, and he of willing victim.

And if Ellin's father can be enticed to sign the same contract, as the promoter hopes, he would make the ideal redskin villain in a "Wild Western," with Irving and Ellin thwarting his vindictive thing for vengeance.

Irving and Ellin would be ideally sympathetic in roles depicting bucolic true love, and he could sing to her "Always."

While in a film drama of the South Seas they could dramatically prove that the call of love recognizes no convention of class.

As for Rudy and Rambova, Irving and Ellin could demonstrate that while true love never does run smooth, there is a tie that binds.

File Tax Return!

Be careful how you file your Federal income tax return.

If you are not, you may unwittingly lay yourself liable to fines and penalties even though you believe you are complying with all rules.

Whether your income is above or below $5,000 you must file a return on or before March 15. If your computations show that a tax is due you must pay at least a quarter of it when you file your return. Use form 1040A (the small blank) for returns on incomes under $5,000.

Now for those whose incomes are over $5,000:

You must make a return on or before March 15. But you may not have had time to complete your computations so you may use the tentative return following it however with your return as computed on Form 1040. You may file this second return before May. 15.

But remember this:

You must file a return on or before March 15.

SUN PICTURES TEST THEORY OF EINSTEIN

Swarthmore Expedition Returns With the Greatest Photos of Eclipse

The Einstein theory will be tested in June, when the Swarthmore expedition, which made pictures of the sun's eclipse at Kenkoelen, Sumatra, on January 14 last, returns to that country for further pictures. At that time the sun will have reached its farthest distance from the area wherein it was pictured at the time of the eclipse. If the star which were shown in the eclipse photographs are in different positions then the Einstein theory will have been proven sound.

All this was made clear today when the Dollar round-the-world liner President Polk docked at the army base with Dr. James A. Miller, director of the Swarthmore Observatory, and several members of the Swarthmore eclipse expedition, aboard. Incidentally Dr. Miller announced his expedition had a photograph of the corona 22 inches across, which was the largest photograph of the phenomenon ever obtained.

In all they made 51 pictures, some with a 43-foot camera, others with two of 15 feet each, some with very short cameras and two with color process cameras.

Others of the expedition who returned with Dr. and Mrs. Miller are Dr. Heber D. Curtiss, head of Allegheny College observatory, with his wife and son Baldwin, 13 years old; Ross W. Marriott and Dean B. McLaughlin and his mother of Swarthmore.

The President Polk had among her 46 passengers 25 sailors from the Mediterranean fleet, some of them being returned as a result of sickness and others as prisoners. The sick men were transferred to the Naval Hospital by ambulance, while the prisoners were placed aboard the navy tug and taken to the navy yard. Ensign Charles F. Just was in charge of the party.

FREAK ORANGES SEIZED BY CUSTOMS OFFICIALS

L. H. Moore of Billings, Mont., brought a supply of oranges back to the United States from Cyprus, only to have them seized. The oranges were the size o fa small boy's head and were distinct novelties to the customs inspectors here. Because of a ban on citrus fruits from certain countries abroad they were condemned. Moore is a mining engineer. He has been in Asia Minor with L. E. Lilly of Springfield, Mo., another engineer.

WOMAN LEADS NARCOTIC FIGHT ON IN R. I.

Mrs. Israel Ahern O'Neil Sponsors Bill That Would Wipe Out the Drug Traffic

Providence, March 9.—A drive to clean drugs out of Rhode Island and halt the narcotic traffic is under way, with a bill giving unlimited powers in the apprehension and conviction of addicts and pedlars to be voted on in a few days by the General Assembly.

Mrs. Isabel Ahearn O'Neil, a representative, sponsors the bill, patterned after the Sherwood Act, which gives police authority to prosecute violators of the Prohibition Act.

To such an extent has the drug traffic expanded in Rhode Island that few deny the need of drastic and elastic laws in the fight against the evil.

Federal agents, who have a large district to cover, are not always on hand when the police learn of traffic in drugs, and to make the raid and seizure their presence is required under present laws. Therefore the police have been handicapped.

"The present law governing the prosecution of dope cases has been entirely inadequate," said Superintendent of Police William F. O'Neil today. "The police are almost powerless to act in such matters.

"We may know that in a certain house there is a large quantity of narcotic drugs, but we cannot make a raid or swear out a search warrant. Neither can we get one from the Federal authorities until we have a sale on the vendor. A law that would empower the police to swear out search warrants for drugs, as we can Illicit liquor, will aid immensely in wiping out the traffic.

"A new law which would broaden the powers of the police in breaking up the drug traffic is greatly to be desired and I hope it will be passed as quickly as possible."

The Legislation Committee of the General Assembly has held several hearings on the proposed new law and while many have spoken for it no word has been uttered against it.

Dope Crusader

Mrs. Isabel Ahearn O'Neil, member of the Rhode Island House, has a bill to put teeth in the State narcotics bill so as to give the police unlimited powers to stop the growing traffic in dope.

'OTHER WOMEN' BARED BY WIFE IN LOVE SUIT

Mrs. Ryan Says Her Husband Took Them to the Theatres Even When Baby Came

Pretty Mrs. Alice E. Ryan of Watertown took the stand in Middlesex Probate Court today to fight charges of cruelty and abuse on which her husband, George G. Ryan of Boston, is seeking a divorce. A quirrel fur coat heightened her attractiveness.

A month before her baby, George W., now ten months old, was born, she testified, she saw her husband with another woman and found letters and theatre ticket stubs in his pockets. Even after the baby came, she said, Ryan went out with other women.

She became highly exercised as she narrated her testimony, speaking impulsively and taking a wide latitude. The court cautioned her sharply several times to limit her testimony to questions asked.

As she was telling of her marital troubles, the baby, in the arms of a relative in court, began to cry and was taken from the courtroom.

WILL TOW S-51 UNDER SEA TO NAVY DRYDOCK

New London, Ct., March 9 (A.P.).—The forces of nature will be used where the power of man-made machinery failed when operations are resumed by the navy next month to lift the sunken submarine S51 off Block Island and tow it 150 miles to Brooklyn Navy Yard.

There are 25 bodies of the 33 victims of the collision between the submarine and the steamship City of Rome last September still unaccounted for.

Plans for towing the craft so long a distance to drydock before raising it to the surface are said to be unique in the tragic history of such salvage work.

Two of the five compartments in the sunken ship have been sealed. The engine room also will be sealed and air will be pumped into the three sealed compartments, forcing out the water. The remaining compartments damaged in the collision will remain flooded until the S51 is in drydock.

HOW STILLMAN SUFFERED BROKEN NECK. A plunge down the stairs in his home at No. 1000 Montello street, Brockton, is the cause of Stillman's injury. For more than a week he continued to work before his injury was ascertained by X-ray at a hospital. He is fifty-seven years old.

AGED WOMAN TAKES POISON

Worcester, March 9.—Swallowing iodine and then turning on the gas, Miss Mary A. Rice, sixty-three, attempted suicide today at her home, No. 19 Ruth street. She is dying at the City Hospital.

She was found unconscious in the kitchen by her housekeeper, Mrs. C. A. Thurston, who smelled gas and investigated.

D. J. H. Sprague was called and he sent her to the hospital.

Miss Rice, according to her housekeeper, has been ill for some time and was despondent.

HELD AS SIKI'S SLAYER

New York, March 9 (Universal).—Martin Maroney, 18, or No. 442 W. 41st street, is under arrest charged with the murder of Battling Siki.

The Senegalese boxer, whose real name was Louis Phal, was killed in the heart of Hell's Kitchen about 5 o'clock on the morning of December 15, as he staggered drunkenly along the street. He was shot twice, once through the heart and once through the head.

He asserted that on the morning of the murder he and some friends were sitting in a coffee house at 9th avenue and 40th street, when Siki entered. He was in an ugly mood, Maroney said.

According to the prisoner's story, the giant Negre picked up a chair and, twirling it over his head, began to curse the white men in the place. Then he went down for the count. Someone had broken a chair over his head.

Maroney said he ran from the place and when he got to 9th avenue and 42nd street, he heard two shots.

WIVES MADE ROOSEVELT BOYS DISCARD WHISKERS

Oyster Bay, N. Y., March 9 (A.P.).—Now it has been told. The greatest hardship of the Roosevelts in the East was when their wives made them cut off their beards. The wives appeared and the beards disappeared just eight hours after Theodore and Kermit ended their seven months of mountaineering.

PROTESTS U. S. SHOTS AT SHIP

Ottawa, Ont., March 9 (A.P.).—The case of the schooner Eastwood of Lunenburg, N. S., whose master claims his vessel was shelled by the United States revenue cutter Seneca, has been referred to the British Embassy at Washington for inquiry.

The Canadian Department of External Affairs received a protest from the owner of the Eastwood, together with twelve pages of affidavits from her crew and photographs of the damage alleged to haveb een done by the shells.

The owner claims the Eastwood was anchored twenty-one miles off the Jersey coast in February when shelled.

The treaty of 1924 between Great Britain and the United States defines the limit within which vessels can be pursued and searched for liquor as one hour's sailing time from shore.

PROBES POLICE PHONE CALLS

An explanation of how their forces used 3,000 additional telephone calls in a month was demanded of twenty-one divisional commanders in the Boston police department today by Police Commissioner Herbert A. Wilson.

Commissioner Wilson ordered the captains to make a rigid checkup to determine who was making the city pay so largely for their private telephoning.

One station was more than 1,000 calls over the allotted number. Twelve stations were far beyond the prescribed limit, and these divisions were the special object of the commissioner's inquiry. The most economical of these twelve used 185 extra calls.

NASH AJAX SIX

Leads the World in Motor Car Value

Tax Reduction Effective on Nash and Ajax Cars Now!

February!

Greatest Month in Nash History and Greatest Ajax Six Month

Swiftly soaring nation-wide Nash sales swept February—although the shortest month of the year—into high position as——the biggest single month of production on Nash cars, alone, in the entire history of the company.

And Ajax Six sales racing on ahead pushed February Ajax business far beyond the biggest previous month since this new Nash-built car was introduced.

February was also the 18th consecutive month Nash sales have surpassed the record set by the corresponding month of the previous year—with the one exception of November, 1925 when production was arbitrarily halted to bring the new "Enclosed Car" motor into manufacture.

Though 14,148 cars were shipped in February Nash-Ajax manufacturing facilities are again being vigorously increased and the great plants are working overtime to cope with the flood of orders pouring in from all sections of the country.

And the reason for this record-breaking Nash-Ajax success is just this—record-breaking QUALITY plus record-breaking VALUE.

MORRIS GEST ACHIEVES NEW 'MIRACLE'

"Carmencita," Presented by Russian Players, Is Revelation of New Art

By MOSES SMITH.

MORRIS GEST has brought another "Miracle" to Boston, for to those who know anything at all of the operatic stage the performance at the Opera House of "Carmencita and the Soldier" by the Moscow Art Theatre Musical Studio was, in its way, a miracle.

With a brilliant stroke of imagination Vladimir Nemirovitch-Dantchenko, director of the studio, has gone a long way to revolutionize opera, casting to the four winds ancient traditions of the lyric stage and putting in their place the elements that go to make up what the Russians call the "Synthetic Theatre."

As the director put it in a short speech in French at the close of the performance, the audience had been seeing and listening to what might be called the "art of tomorrow, or even of the day after tomorrow."

The occasion was naturally a brilliant one, as Gest has a way of making the opening of any of his productions. Following the unusually powerful performance by the company, and after the director had spoken briefly, Mr. Gest refused to be inveigled into making a long speech, but thanked Bostonians for their support.

What the Russians, under their genius of a director, do, is not to present in opera with set arias, set choruses, occasional flashings of dramatic action, with orchestral accompaniment, but to set forth on the stage the vital elements of tragic drama, with the intensity heightened by the music.

Nor is their method the Wagnerian one, for Wagner was primarily the exponent of the orchestra as the most important factor in developing the drama. For real synthesis of the arts, which Wagner sought, these Russians must be given credit, if not wholly accomplishing it, at least partially bringing it about.

First and foremost they lay great stress on acting. And how they can and do act! They retain the chorus, not for the purpose of rendering pleasing ensemble numbers, but to explain the progress of the drama, much like the ancient Greek chorus.

The whole drama, which is taken from Merimee's "Carmen," passes before one's eyes without a change of the curious original scenery, consisting of pillars, foot-bridges, arches and little else.

The music is the music of Bizet's opera, but rearranged and adapted to suit the needs of the text, which was not the one Bizet used at all, but a new scenario by Constantin Lipskeroff.

They decry the star system or any other system for singling out individuals for praise. Yet we cannot refrain from at least mentioning the moving characterization of "Carmen," by Olga Baklanova, one which makes other impersonations of the role seem feather.

With all the superb acting one heard excellent voices singing with an ease that even typical operatic stars, so concerned primarily on the voice, might envy.

SPICY VARIETY AT KEITH'S

Boston's own Eddie Dowling is back at Keith's, his first love, this week with his quaint Irish songs and stories. Judging from the reception received, many of his old friends were on hand to greet him. His act is not all comedy. He has inserted a bit of pathos, written by himself and called "Picardy Roses." There are some new songs in the act too, written and played by James Hanley.

Ethel Davis, an unusually clever comedienne, late of the "Greenwich Village Follies," and "Long Tack Sam," who might be called a "Chinese Jack-of-all-trades," are on close call for second honors on the bill.

"Long Tack Sam," assisted by a large company, goes through his act with breathless speed. It covers the entire field from acrobatic to magic, with singing, toe dancing, and a grotesque Chinese Charleston sandwiched between.

Ted and Kathrya Andrews have an attractive dancing act, prettily staged and well accompanied by Frederick Cromweed.

The old vaudeville favorite, Frank Dobson, with a bevy of lovesick beauties to assist him, and for whom he prescribes a cure in his role as the "Love Doctor," was well received.

The remainder of the bill includes the Musical Johnsons, Frank Jerome and Evelyn, Frank Farron, Ernest Brenck and Bella Donna and the usual Pathe News and Topics of the Day.

Rev. H. S. Burrage Dead

Kennebunkport, Me., March 9 (A.P.).—Rev. Henry S. Burrage, editor, author and historian, died at his home here today. He was eighty-nine years old. He was born in Pittsburg, Mass.

PEGGY EXHIBITS CHARMS HERE

Peggy Hopkins Joyce, heroine of many marriages and romances, is showing her pulchritude in the film play: "The Skyrocket" at the New Boston and the St. James, in the Hub this week.

PEGGY JOYCE FEATURES IN FILM PLAY

Peggy Hopkins Joyce, of many nuptials and not a little fame on the musical stage, has found time between trips to Europe to invade Hollywood and register her charms on the screen in a film called "The Skyrocket," and now showing simultaneously at the two new Keith-Albee houses, the New Boston and the St. James.

Naturally enough, there are scenes of lavishness and much wearing of fine clothes—all well calculated to afford the blonde and slender beauty of the star to shine in its own right.

The fashions displayed are much of the film's entertainment and sufficient to make the feminine element of the audience gasp in admiration, but it also has a very deftly and pleasant yarn of an orphaned child who literally skyrockets her way to fame in the movies.

From the most humble beginning on the "lot" as an extra girl, Peggy wins her chance to lay her case before a famous director whose fancy has wandered her way.

Earle Williams, now with a mustache and hardly recognizable to many fans who followed him some few seasons ago as a leading man, plays the role of the great "Dvorak" whose favor means fortunes for the lucky ones.

Owen Moore appears opposite Miss Joyce as "Mickey Reid," a successful novelist whose stories provide the material for the screen activities of the star. Marshall Neilan directed, and to him principally must go the credit for making "The Skyrocket" a very pleasant film.

Vaudeville at both houses completes the bills.

METROPOLITAN FEATURES DIX IN COMEDY

'Garden Festival' Is Beautiful Setting for Chopin and Schubert Concert

If not already overtaken by fame and fortune, Richard Dix has time coming to him in the not too hazy future, when his latest film, "Let's Get Married," at the Metropolitan, completes its showing throughout the country, the "fan" mail in his direction is bound to descend in showers upon him. And all because he seems to have lately developed a fine flair for comedy.

Although there are moments in "Let's Get Married" where the direction—done by Gregory La Cava—is strikingly bright, it is by very few other means than the pleasant personality of the star that the film is one of the pleasantest bits of farce seen this season.

The story itself, a free and easy adaptation of a former stage vehicle, is a light trifle and, in spots, runs thin.

It starts out smartly with one of the best comedy fights ever put on the screen. Dix, as an athletic college boy sut-up, undertakes to invade a night club and thoroughly dismantle it for the sake of celebrating dear old Alma Mater's victory on the gridiron.

The stage presentation of the week, Frank Cambria's "Garden Festival," taken from a Watteau painting of the 17th century, is distinguished by fine singing and playing of Schubert and Chopin.

Let's Get Married

Lois Wilson makes a beautiful foil for Richard Dix in the laughable college farce, "Let's Get Married," film feature at the Metropolitan this week.

BUS TO SUPPLANT TROLLEY HARTFORD TO SPRINGFIELD

Springfield, March 9 (A.P.).—Virtual abandonment of trolley service between this city and Hartford, Ct., is forecast by the announcement of the Hartford & Springfield Street Railway Company that beginning next Monday, buses will largely supercede the cars, which have been operated for twenty years. Trolley service north of Warehouse Point, Ct., and also to Somers, Ct., will be greatly curtailed.

MELODY WEEK AT LOEW'S STATE

"The Devil's Circus" Is Film Feature; 11 Talented Syncopators Make Hit

This is Melody Week at Loew's State, with a program of tuneful, lilting melodies, songs, rhymes and rhythms.

The picture feature of the bill is Norma Shearer in "The Devil's Circus," with Charles Emmett Mack and Carmel Myers in prominent roles.

It is a simple story simply told, and therein lies its greatness. Its characters are thoroughly plausible and might really exist, and they work out a drama in which entertaining bits of detail and convincing characterizations successfully sustain interest. The picture has drama, melodrama, comedy and pathos.

The leading stage attraction presented Irving Aaronson's Commanders, an organization composed of 11 talented syncopators. This group was a feature of Elsie Janis' "Puzzles of 1925."

Philip Spitalny and his Loew's Concert Orchestra again proved its worth and gave an excellent program. Short picture subjects completed the bill.

LUPINO BACK IN ROLE IN "NAUGHTY RIQUETTE"

The opening of the third week of Mitzi and "Naughty Riquette," at the Shubert, was signalled by the return of Stanley Lupino to the role of the acrobatic Michu. Lupino has been out of the cast for several days, owing to a severe knee injury sustained by slipping off a table on the stage. He was given a cordial welcome by star, company and audience. Joseph Spree, who played Lupino's role during his absence, with considerable success, resumed his former character in the play.

DRAMA AND FUN AT ORPHEUM

A vaudeville bill of well blended variety and Rex Beach's "The Auction Block," with Charlie Ray, Eleanor Boardman and Sally O'Neil in the leading roles make up the entertainment at Loew's Orpheum Theatre.

The picture is a modernized version of a popular novel and tells of the romance of the son of a rich financier and a beauty contest winner from a small town in South Carolina.

The feature act of the vaudeville bill was Vie Quinn, assisted by Palmer Young and Billy McDermott and the Sunnybrook orchestra.

It is a lively miniature musical revue. Will J. Kennedy and company presented a funny comedy sketch entitled "Punch Me."

Smith and Holden comprised another team which furnished more than its share of amusement.

Other acts of more or less merit were Alf Grant, in songs and stories; Wedge, Van and Wedge, in an offering of versatility, and the M. E. Co. Line Trio in a novelty called "Golfowog."

RUSSIAN PLAYERS SCORE TRIUMPH IN FIRST NIGHT AT OPERA HOUSE

AUDIENCE ENTHUSED BY ACTING

Boston Society Well Represented in Boxes and Orchestra Stalls

THE VERSATILE AND gifted "Russians" (to give the Moscow Art Theatre Musical Studio its familiar designation) have scored another triumph and added to their already heavy laurel wreath many new and shining leaves. An enthusiastic and most appreciative audience gave them greeting at the Boston Opera House.

AND COUNTLESS felicitations were showered upon Morris Gest, that personage of the stage who brought the Musical Studio to Boston; upon Vladimir Nemirovitch-Dantchenko, its originator, and upon Madame Dantchenko.

MADAME DANTCHENKO and her illustrious husband are in town for the week during which the Russians occupy the Opera House stage, and for the opening performance they were the cynosure of all eyes in their stage box way at the right of the horseshoe.

A COSTUME of rich black livened with gorgeous embroidery was chosen by Madame Dantchenko for the premiere. It carried a flavor of the Far East in its exotic design, and quite distinctly Russian was her headdress, a narrow bandeau rising to a point on the forehead.

NEARBY, OFFICIALDOM was present in the person of Mrs. Alvan T. Fuller, the First Lady of [illegible] and party including Major Ross T. Whistler, aide to the Governor, Mr. and Mrs. George Sylvester and Miss Mary Vinton Murray.

MISS MURIEL AMES.

(Posed especially for Boston Evening American).

Morris Gest (left), who brought the "Moscow Art Theatre Musical Studio" to Boston, in conversation with Vladimir Nemirovitch-Dantchenko, its originator, and Madame Dantchenko at the Opera House.

VERY HANDSOME was Mrs. Fuller, in a gown of green, richly beaded, worn beneath an evening wrap of rose and gold brocade upon a ground of dull gold. Miss Murray was in mauve, and Mrs. Sylvester in silver cloth.

OF THE EARLY comers there were Professor Edward Burlingame Hill and Mrs. Hill, who are of the patrons for the Musical Studio's Boston showings. Mrs. Hill wore a gown of black lace and satin beneath an evening wrap of rose and fur.

MISS MABEL BAYARD THAYER, debutante daughter of Mrs. Bayard Thayer, wore a wrap of unspotted ermine over a simply designed frock of wine-red velvet. Miss Olga Frothingham and Miss Ellen Frothingham were other Young Set members who went to the Opera House for the premiere.

THEIR YOUNGER SISTER, Miss Eugenia Frothingham, was also in attendance, one of the few sub-debutantes in the enthusiastic audience. Little Miss Frothingham was in blue. Miss Olga in black and white, and Miss Ellen in mauve.

MR. AND MRS. FRANCIS P. SEARS came with a large party. Mrs. Sears wearing a wrap of rich white fur over a simple black frock. Mrs. A. Lynde Cochran of the same group also was in black with wrap of sable.

MRS. WILLIAM DANA ORCUTT'S costume carried the glittering note which marks the Winter's mode, a gown of gold and wrap of the same gleaming beauty. Mr. and Mrs. Orcutt are of the Studio patrons.

ALSO, MRS. GEORGE HAWLEY who with Mr. Hawley had places in the parterre. Mrs. Hawley's gown of black sequins was a smart straightline affair emphasized by a stole of ermine and diamond ornaments.

IN A MERRY little group came several young matrons—Mesdames George S. West, Thomas S. Blumer, George Peabody Gardiner, Jr., and Hampden Robb. Mrs. Robb was in black, Mrs. Gardiner in rose, Mrs. West in gold and rose and Mrs. Blumer in ecru.

MRS. ALVIN F. SORTWELL, Mrs. Harris Livermore, Mrs. Pierpont L. Stackpole and Mrs. Robert Livermore, who may also be designated in the smart young matron set, put in an appearance as is to be expected of these music enthusiasts.

OF THE DISTINGUISHED older coterie none was more in the picture than Mrs. Randolph Morgan Appleton in wrap and gown of rich black. Or the handsome and always beautifully turned out Mrs. William Alex Gaston, who came with Colonel Gaston.

THE GASTON GROUP included Mrs. Frederick Strong Moseley, whose hyacinth blue crepe was distinctly in contrast to Mrs. Gaston's black satin and wrap of sable. Mrs. George H. Lyman was in blue with touches of jet.

A BRILLIANT FIGURE in the company was Mrs. Nathaniel F. Emmons in wrap of white over a smart confection of pansy purple satin and crepe, with frothy scarf of tulle in the same becoming shade.

WITH MRS. EMMONS came Miss Mildred Bradley, wearing a gown of honey-yellow and a wrap of kolinsky. Miss Suzette Dabney's gown of vivid green was set off with a stole of ermine. Mrs. Augustus Thorndike, Jr., set off her statuesque good looks with rose color.

A VERY CHARMING figure was Mrs. Edward S. R. Brandt, in flower-designed crepe and rich shawl of rare Oriental embroidery. A Sears Condit family party included Mrs. Condit in black velvet, Miss Louise Condit in old blue and Mrs. Arthur Nickerson Winslow in batik crepe of black and white.

NEXT FRIDAY the Dantchenkos are the distinguished guests about whom revolves a luncheon at the Chilton Club having Mrs. Ralph Adams Cram as hostess, an affair first scheduled for last Sunday.

SAMUEL CURTIS, JR., Radio Editor

The feature program at station WNAC this evening will be by the Malden Cadet Band, with assisting artists. This will come on the air at 8 o'clock. Following the Band, the regular weekly Auction Bridge game will be broadcast.

WBZ COURSE ON JOURNALISM

Edward E. Whiting, well-known newspaper man and columnist, will be the lecturer in the new University Extension Course being presented by WBZ this evening at 7:30. Journalism is the subject of this new course, and the lecturer will give the listeners the benefit of many years' experience in the newspaper field.

The ground to be covered in this series will be found intensely valuable in providing technique in English composition, which will prove of practical assistance to persons who are anxious to secure publication of material of any kind. Not only will the listener have the advantage of hearing these interesting lectures, but a complete course of study material has been arranged by Mr. Whiting.

Detailed instruction will be given in reporting, make-up work and social departmental work. The writing of editorials, head-lines and feature stories will be emphasized. Those who wish to enroll in this course and receive the very helpful study material that has been prepared by the lecturer may do so by sending name and address, together with the Department of University Extension, State House, Boston.

At 8 o'clock Frank Ryan will take over the WBZ mike and keep the hockey fans informed about the professional hockey game in the Boston Arena between the Boston Bruins and New York. Watching the game from the special broadcasting booth, Frank Ryan tells of the hockey history that is being made before him, while fans all over the country echo the cheers that ring through the arena.

Slowly but surely the Boston Bruins are fighting their way toward the top of the list and a place in the play-offs. With this "fighting spirit urging them on, these games are filled with thrills and excitement galore.

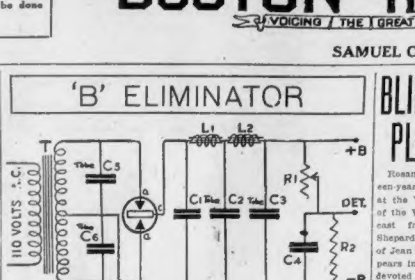
COUPLE HELD IN DEATHS OF THEIR FORMER MATES

Flora, Ill., March 9 (A.P.)—Investigation into the deaths of Mrs. Laura Mallisky and Abilla Bible, continued today, with the former husband of one and the former wife of the other, who now are married, held without bail on murder charges. The two held are Ernest L. Mallisky, a locomotive engineer, and Mrs. Elsie Bible Mallisky. They are charged with murder of the former Mrs. Mallisky, reported by a chemist to have died from poisoning last September. Little is known concerning the death of Bible a year and a half ago. His widow was married to the engineer about two weeks after the death of Mallisky's first wife.

WHISKERS BANNED FOR CAB DRIVERS IN ROME

Rome, March 9 (A.P.)—Roman cab drivers and taxi chauffeurs may not wear whiskers. An edict of Governor Cremonesi says they are indecorous and incompatible with the dignity of worthy citizens. The new decree also provides thta cabbies and taximen must wear "decent black clothing, stiff collars, presentable ties and black cloth hats of the type used by aeronautical officers, with shiny black bands and shiny black chin straps." During the Summer, a light grey hat of the same type will be required.

'B' ELIMINATOR



Here is a simple schematic diagram of the "B" battery eliminator that was shown in the Evening American some days ago. "T" is the step-up transformer, and L1-L2 are the 30 henry choke coils. These three units are made by the following manufacturers: Acme, All-American, Dongan, General Radio, Jefferson, Thordarson. A-A-C is the Raytheon tube, which operates without filament. C1-C2 are 2 mfd. condensers. C3 is an 8 mfd. condenser. C4 is .5 mfd., while C5-C6 are .1 mfd. R1-R2 are Bradley or Clarostat resistances, R1 being variable from 10,000 to 100,000 ohms, and R2 fixed at 100,000 ohms. This eliminator has been tested thoroughly, and all traces of alternating current hum has been effectively removed.

Prisoners Song Wins in Vote

In the recent ballot taken by the Boston Evening American on the popularity of the Prisoners Song, the results were 9 to 1 in favor of it.

The Prisoners Song is heard inces antly over the radio. Broadcast officials say they cannot understand the reason for its continued popularity.

Many are of the opinion that this is a signal for the return into favor of the old time songs.

Radio Queries

Q.—J. L., Dorchester: I have a five-tube Freshman Masterpiece. When I tune in on local stations I get a humming noise and a whistle. I use Cunningham tubes and an indoor aerial. I cannot get distance even Springfield. Could you suggest anything to help me?

A.—Your hum and whistle on local stations may be due to the fact that your set is oscillating. If this is the case you should be able to remedy the trouble by turning down the rheostats. Perhaps you live in a neighborhood where the "bloopers" squealing receiving sets are bothersome. Don't worry over long distance reception. Present conditions have been very much against long distance.

Q.—A. W. C., Boston: I have a three-tube Westinghouse tuner with two stage amplifier attached. Wavelength of set is from 100 to 700 meters. For local stations I get as many as three on the same dial setting. After 11 o'clock can get nothing. I have two antennas, one 100 feet long, the other 80. Both A and B batteries test O. K.

A.—Your set is one of an obsolete type, and will tune broadly anywhere within this city limits. A wave trap might help you, or else you might try connecting a .0025 mfd. fixed condenser between aerial and ground posts of the receiver. Don't worry about the long distance reception, as nobody is getting any.

Q.— W. F. K., Dorchester: I have a five-tube set. Can get only WEEI and WNAC on the loud speaker. I am using a Berwick speaker, Powers B batteries, four bootleg tubes and one 201-A tube. My A battery is a Perrine. Can't even get distant stations on the earphones. Aerial is about 75 feet counting lead-in. Ground is on gas pipe in cellar. Please answer soon.

A.—Have your tubes tested. Don't expect any long distance. Conditions have been too poor.

AMERICA DEVELOPING OWN PEASANT CLASS

Washington, March 9 (A.P.)—To determine by comparison with foreign countries to what extent the United States is developing a peasant class, Dr. C. J. Galpin, head of the division of farm population and rural life of the Department of Agriculture, will spend five months in Europe this Summer. "America seems to be beginning to develop a pasantry," said Dr. Galpin today. "The tendency is localized as yet in those regions where the small tenant abounds or where there is a large proportion of agricultural laborers.

BE A BOSTON BOOSTER

BUSINESS BEST SINCE BEFORE WAR—NASH

C. W. Nash, president of the Nash Motors Company, which, with its subsidiary concern, the Ajax Motor Company, employs more than 14,000 workmen in Milwaukee and Kenosha, Wis., says that business generally in the United States is far better today than it has been at any time since before the war. The outlook for industries of all kinds holds promise of continued prosperity, he said.

Mr. Nash is attending the Automobile Show and will talk today to New England dealers at a luncheon given by C. P. Rockwell, Inc., at the Copley Plaza.

"My reason for believing that business is better off today than it has been for many years," he said on his arrival, "is that all classes in the United States are enjoying a feeling of confidence such as has not existed for a long time. People are in a better frame of mind, especially the farmers, and after all, they are the basis of our prosperity."

Speaking with special reference to the automobile industry, Nash said he is convinced that the peak in the industry was reached three years ago, and that the struggle now is for the survival of the fittest.

"When I say that the peak was reached three years ago, I do not mean that we will steadily decrease our production," he said. "My idea is that we reached the peak so far as manufacturing facilities are concerned three years ago. At that time the saturation point was reached, the point where automobile factories in the United States were equipped to manufacture more cars than could be sold. This is not to say that more automobiles are being made than are in demand. Such a practice would be suicidal.

"In January, 1925, in an address before retailers in Chicago, I said that the saturation point had been reached, but was careful to explain that it was my belief that more cars would be sold in 1926 than during the year previous. Such was the case. In our own plant our 1925 production was 69 per cent. higher than in 1924, and we anticipate that our production this year will be at least 40 per cent. above last year.

"Just as fast as the European countries are becoming rehabilitated American automobiles are being shipped there. The foreign field today is as fertile a market as was America twelve years ago, and with the increased interest everywhere in good roads, we may expect to see South America, Australia and Europe absorb to a great extent the production for which there is no demand in the United States. Australia probably heads the export list now, Sweden is fast developing into one of our best markets, as is South America."

EVEREADY HOUR

at 9 P. M.
Eastern Standard Time

THOUSANDS of comments and suggestions came from the radio audience as result of the "Listening-In" Eveready Hour a few weeks ago. Still much classification work ahead before the program desires of the majority can be determined. In the meantime, tonight's Hour will reflect some of those desires in a miscellaneous offering utilizing as many audience suggestions as can be compassed in sixty minutes. With an interpolated feature—Don Marquis' "Noah, An' Jonah An' Cap'n John Smith."

Broadcast by National Carbon Co., Inc.

WEAF New York, WJAR Providence, WEEI Boston, WFI Philadelphia, WGR Buffalo, WCAE Pittsburgh, WSAI Cincinnati, WTAM Cleveland, WWJ Detroit, WCCO Minneapolis, KSD St. Louis

Use the right size "B" battery

THE length of time you listen in each day and the size of your "B" batteries in relation to your set determine how long the "B" batteries will last.

Follow these simple rules for "B" battery satisfaction and economy:

On 1 to 3 tubes—Use Eveready No. 772.
On 4 or more tubes — Use the Heavy Duty "B" Batteries, either No. 770, or the even longer-lived Eveready Layerbilt No. 486.
On all but single tube sets—Use a "C" battery.

When these rules are followed, the No. 772 will last for a year or more, and the Heavy Duties for eight months or longer, when listening at the year-round average of two hours a day.

NOTE: A "C" battery greatly increases the life of your "B" batteries and gives a quality of reception unobtainable without it. Radio sets may easily be changed to permit the use of a "C" battery by any competent radio service man. Manufactured and guaranteed by votes against the present law and only two in favor. Local option was favored by 59 and opposed by 13.

Are you in favor of the manufacture and sale of light wines and beer?

Or do you feel that the present law should stand?

The Hearst newspapers, including the Boston Evening American, are taking a nation-wide poll on that vital question. How do YOU stand on the subject? We want to know.

This is not an effort to sway public opinion one way or the other. It is solely an honest attempt to determine the REAL opinion of the public on this important matter.

Never has a newspaper poll created more interest than the present one. The Boston Evening American invites every man and woman of voting age in New England to participate. We want YOUR vote. We desire that the poll shall be as representative as possible to determine just how the people of this country feel on this important question.

MARK YOUR BALLOT.

Just clip the ballot printed in another column and after marking it send at once to the Boston Evening American to be recorded. Your name will not be printed. The only reason we ask you to sign the ballot is as evidence of your good faith. We want this poll to be a strictly fair one.

The Boston Evening American invites other newspapers in New England to join in making the poll a success. This newspaper will gladly print the figures of any poll taken by other newspapers in this section of the country, if forwarded to us. It also invites organizations to take up the question for an expression of opinion so that the widest possible publicity may be given to the subject.

In the first 50,000 votes cast throughout the country, 45,387 expressed themselves one way or another on the light beer and wine issue. Of this number 40,773 favored modification of the Volstead act to permit the manufacture and sale of wine and beer, while 4,614 were opposed. In the same block of votes 37,196 were opposed to the present prohibition law and 5,387 in favor. Of these 5,387 for the present law, 1,600 favored light wines and beer.

CHIEF, 2 POLICE ARE ARRESTED AT PASSAIC

Passaic, N. J., March 9 (A.P.)—After trying in vain since Friday to have Passaic and Paterson constables serve warrants on Chief of Police Richard O. Zober and two patrolmen charged with clubbing persons in the woolen mill strike, Justice of the Peace Julius Katz has at last found a way.

He turned the warrants over to Sheriff Morgan, at the suggestion of Prosecutor De Yoe, and they were served at police headquarters and at the chief's home, where he is ill.

The cases were heard before Recorder Davidson and the defendants released on their own recognizance, all pleading not guilty. They were not suspended from the force, pending Grand Jury action.

Albert Weisbord, leader of the strikers, hoped today to have 4,000 employes of the United Piece Dye Works, at Lodi, N. J., join demonstrations there against Passaic, Garfield and Clifton mill owners. He planned to have strikers meet several thousand strong to march to Lodi.

CREWS IN FIGHT TO SAVE 20 IN MINE; 9 DIE

Eccles, West Va., March 9 (A.P.)—With the lives of twenty entombed miners at stake, rescue workers headed by State and federal officials, fought today to penetrate a barrier of debris near the bottom of a mine of the Crab Orchard Improvement Company near here where an explosion took a toll of at least nine lives beside wailing in the twenty.

The explosion not only closed entry to the mine but sent a wave of death-dealing gas through a connecting passage. Lowell Goins, negro, was killed by the fumes and several others suffered ill effects and were taken to the hospital. But of forty then in the workings, all except Goins were brought out alive.

The twenty-eight men were believed scattered through the various entries.

About thirty feet from the bottom of the deeper shaft the rescue teams encountered the mass of debris which delayed their further progress for several hours. Ventilating fans had not been affected by the blast and observations of the experts showed the current of fresh air was going down the shaft, though there was no way to determine whether falls of slate dislodged by the explosion might have cut if off from the men.

BETTER THAN SODA

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. Besides, it neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowels and gently urges this souring waste from the system without purging. It is far more pleasant to take than soda.

STAR SURPRISE AT AUTO SHOW

One of the most admired exhibits at the Auto Show is the new Star Six Landau Sedan. It is handsome in its hues and yet so compact as to be ideal for handling in congested traffic.

AUTO IS PUSHED OVER CLIFF

Smashed by a drop of 125 feet over Cottage Hill cliff, Winthrop Beach, the nearly new sedan of Howard A. Finn of No. 15 Seymour street, Winthrop, was found today, a few hours after it was stolen.

Police say that the automobile was deliberately pushed over the edge of the high cliff on the rock-strewn beach below, where at high tide it is submerged. The car was not stripped and they suspect it was wrecked purely out of malice.

Finn found his machine missing when he left an Odd Fellows celebration in a Fremont street building at Winthrop Center. Patrolman John Haig discovered the wreck at the foot of the cliff.

STAR '6' LANDAU SEDAN

One of the real surprises of the Boston show is the new six-cylinder Star landau sedan, by Durant Motors, Inc.

This body type, which is ordinarily mounted only on cars in a much higher priced range, makes it one of the most appealing low-priced cars on the market. Bodies by Hayes-Hunt. Leather-covered rear quarters. Nickeled landau irons. Plate glass windows in rear quarters. One-piece windshield. Rear vision mirror. Automatic windshield wiper. Combination motometer and winged radiator cap. The price on this car, $975, makes it the lowest priced four-door six-cylinder sedan on the market.

One of the important features about the new landau sedan is its roominess, without giving an outward appearance of bulk, weight or rear overhang.

Although this car has an appearance of length, the wheel base is the same as the other Star models of the Six line, which gives it an exceptionally short turning radius and, according to the builders, makes it an ideal car in traffic.

BOSTON MOTOR CLUB TO SEEK NEW MEMBERS

10,000 Is Goal Set by Volunteer Workers During Week of March 18

Boston Motor Club Week will be observed from March 18 to 25, when a host of volunteer workers will strive to enroll 10,000 new members to the Hub branch of the American Automobile Association.

"A successful automobile club can accomplish much for a community," declared Miner H. Paddock, Jr., president of the Boston Motor Club. The Boston Motor Club aided in the defeat of a tax bill, termed unfair, in 1925. There are 200,000 eligible members in Greater Boston, its present list of 1400 representing only a fraction of this group.

It is expected that 2,400 workers will compete for more than 100 prizes offered by the club for signing up new names. C. E. Fay, of the C. E. Fay Company, donated a new 1926 Chrysler sedan as the major award, second being $500 in cash offered by the Boston Automobile Dealers' Association.

E. Arthur Robinson, No. 80 Federal street, Boston, as campaign chairman, being assisted by a campaign cabinet of 15 and a Campaign Committee of 30 members.

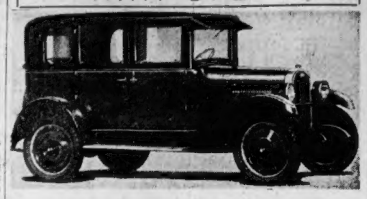
COMBINES BEAUTY WITH UTILITY



The above is a photo of the new Chevrolet Landau, on exhibit at W. C. Sills, Inc., retail show rooms, Nos. 27 Huntington avenue, and at the Automobile Show exhibit.

FISHER BODIES FOR CHEVROLET

"The Chevrolet Motor Company goes into the year 1926 with the most complete line of cars in its history. The company now produces four closed models, two open cars and two trucks," says W. C. Sills.

"In addition to the smartly appointed new landau, the Chevrolet closed line now includes a coupe, coach and sedan. All have bodies by Fisher.

"Striking new colors in Duco render the group of closed models even more attractive. The coupe and landau are finished in the new Arizona gray Duco, with interior decorations and velour upholstery to match.

"The new finish of the coach is Bloomfield gray, while the sedan is in a rich Algerian blue. Rear seat footrests are provided in the sedan and landau sedan.

"Complete equipment is carried on the closed line, including the VV one-piece ventilating windshield, parking lamps, sun visor, automatic windshield wiper, dome light, silk roller shades and Ternstedt fittings.

"Gunmetal gray Duco finish is retained on the two popular open models, the touring and roadster. The rear compartment of the roadster body has been altered to permit of greatly increased luggage capacity.

The two Chevrolet truck models are in one-half and one-ton capacities.

A PIRATE of HEARTS

By BEATRICE BURTON
Author of "GILDED KISSES"

The Love Story of a Boston Girl Who Wants Only One Man---and the Husband Who Strayed

READ THIS FIRST

SYLVIA STARR, employed in the Boston Public Library, has been engaged to RANDALL PHELPS, a Boston real estate man, for nearly a year when he suddenly asks her to free him. He tells her he has fallen in love with her best friend, FAY SHIRLEY.

Sylvia is stunned. But she gives Ranny up, much to the satisfaction of her Aunt Agnes ("AUNT AGONY"), the spinster who brought her up.

"You didn't seem to mind when Fay kissed you the other night," said Sylvia. Then she knew she had made a mistake.

She calls Ranny a good-for-nothing, and urges Sylvia to marry PETER WILK, a well-to-do bachelor of an old Boston family. But Sylvia cares for no one but Ranny.

As the time for the wedding of Fay and Ranny draws near, Fay tells Sylvia they have decided they don't really care enough for each other to marry! And Sylvia discovers that she is seeing a great deal of her old beau, EDDIE CARTER, a Boston business man.

On a moonlit May night, Peter gives a picnic supper by a Concord lake in honor of Sylvia's birthday and afterward the crowd plays hide-and-seek in the woods. Sylvia finds herself paired off with Ranny, who makes love to her and tells her that after all she's the only girl he ever cared about! And Sylvia, afraid of losing him a second time, suggests that they run away that very night and be married. So they do, wedding in Manchester, N. H.

Ranny tires of the honeymoon in George's Mills, N. H., before the first week is over and longs to get back to the gay life he leads in Boston. Sylvia hides her disappointment and returns to Boston and spends two weeks furnishing their little flat, The Nest, in Beacon street, beyond Audubon road. On the first night they are to have dinner there, he comes home three hours after meal-time, bringing with him Eddie Carter and Fay. Later in the evening, when he has been drinking, Sylvia sees Fay kiss him while they are dancing. At midnight he drives Eddie and Fay home and is gone for more than an hour, while Sylvia sits up waiting for him.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

Copyright, 1926, Johnson Features, Inc.

CHAPTER XII

When Sylvia heard Ranny coming she closed the windows, snapped off the lights and flew into the bedroom to get ready for bed.

She didn't want Ranny to know that she had been sitting up, worrying about him, wondering where he was so long. He hated anyone to "make a fuss over him," as he called it. He liked to come and go, as he pleased, with no questions asked. And Sylvia had made up her mind

JINX SHIP AGAIN ADRIFT AS TOW LINE BREAKS

French Liner Kentucky, Saved From Ice Fields, Faces New Peril on Nearing Port

St. Johns, N. F., March 9.—The luck that has broken badly for the French steamship Kentucky for the past two weeks came back on her way and she went adrift from her towing ship in a southeast gale while only sixty-five miles from port.

The craft was being towed by the steamship Sylvia, after being dragged out of ice fields that had crushed her bow, 250 miles southeast of Cape Spear.

Fear that the disabled vessel was being blown toward the shore was expressed today as the Sylvia maneuvered for a new tow position in the gale that was still whipping the north Atlantic six hours after subsiding in force.

The Kentucky came to grief in the ice fields when the grinding ice crushed in her bow plates, starting leaks. She radioed for aid and the Sylvia, putting over to the disabled craft, took her in tow, seven first.

The crippled steamer was bound from Dunkirk to New York with a cargo of copper and general freight and a crew of 46 men.

Pie Tempts Church Mouse to Bare $5,000 in Loot

Philadelphia, March 9 (A.P.)—Proverbial hunger of the church mouse was demonstrated here when Samuel "Church Mouse" Clark, a negro, was induced to admit, for an apple pie, that he had robbed 50 churches. A search of his room revealed $5,000 worth of silver and Bibles.

The pie episode came at the end of a long grilling by police. Clark had given several addresses which proved fictitious. He was asked if he was hungry and replied in the affirmative. A police captain sent for an apple pie.

"All of this is yours—provided you tell the truth," said he.

"Ah'll tell yuh anythin'," replied the prisoner, and between bites related how he had looted the churches.

SPRING TARRIES ANOTHER DAY

Miss Spring will sit in the lap of Winter for thirty-six hours more according to her official guardian the weather man.

In the meantime skies will continue fair while shivery winds will play out of the northwest across Greater Boston territory.

Early today the temperature stood at 23 degrees above, a rise of two degrees over the official mark of the night.

JURIST RAPS WOMEN AS GRAFTERS

Too Many Wives of Today Are Parasites, He Writes in Cosmopolitan

Wives are grafters.

Women are money-grabbers, intriguers, contributors to immorality.

So declares Judge Selah B. Strong of the Supreme Court of New York, who has watched a steady stream of angry, revengeful wives and husbands pass through his courtrooms—the women seeking divorce, legal separation and alimony, and the men complaining bitterly of injustice.

Sparing no words, illustrating his views liberally by actual cases, Justice Strong declares that he bares the facts even though he knows his recital will bring down upon his head the condemnation of countless women.

Wins Gem Medal

Frank H. Walter, hoseman of Rescue Company No. 1 of the Boston Fire Department, has won the Boston Evening American's second diamond medal awarded for the "most meritorious act" during the last six months. His wife will be given $100 in gold.

Wife Will Receive $100 in Gold

For having performed "the most meritorious act" of any man in the Boston Fire Department during a six months' period ending February 1, 1926, Hoseman Frank H. Walter of Rescue Company No. 1, Church street, South End, is to receive the second diamond medal awarded by the Boston Evening American. Walter is married and has six young children. He lives at No. 95 Poplar street, Roslindale. His wife will receive $100 in gold from this newspaper as a part of the award.

The act of heroism for which Hoseman Walter will be decorated was an unusual one. At the risk of his own life he descended three times 30 feet into the hold of the Oil Tanker Phoenix at East Braintree, December 1, following an explosion, in an effort to rescue two workmen, later found dead. Six feet of gasoline was in the hold when he descended on his errand of mercy. The valorous fireman's head was burned by gasoline fumes before he completed his work, which included recovery of one of the bodies.

Hoseman Walter was one of four men recommended by the Boston Fire Department Board of Merit for the Boston Evening American Diamond Medal. After careful consideration of all four cases a representative citizens committee appointed by this newspaper decided that Walter was entitled to the award. This committee comprised the Rev. J. C. Maasse, pastor of Tremont Temple, the Rev. Harry Levi, Rabbi of Temple Israel; Attorney Robert Gallagher, Robert H. Fay, vice-president of Exchange Trust Company and Joseph P. Manning.

Boston's "best fireman" for the past six months is 37 years of age and has been a member of the department seven years. Prior to that he served in the United States Army two years and in the navy four years. During his seven years in Boston Fire Department he has twice been commended, the first time for stopping a runaway horse on Church street when the lives of many children were in danger and at another time for responding to a fire alarm on a day off

INGRATITUDE IS SHABBY

NIETZSCHE says: "Ingratitude is want of the deeper knowledge of life," and I agree with him!

Ingratitude is a shabby thing, an unthoughtful trait. Gratitude springs from fine sensibilities, an appreciation of values.

Somebody renders us a small service. Nothing remarkable, but he went out of his way to do it, and did his best to help and to please.

By our manner of feeling and expressing our thanks, we make that service seem either big or small, both in his eyes and ours. Why not make him feel it was big? It will make him so happy and fill us with satisfaction as well. If he sees how much his kindness is appreciated, he will repeat it either to us or to another—and the good is doubled.

Ingratitude is a want of generosity, a sign of masriiness in our make-up. People who are sparing in their appreciation are indeed depressing people to live with. They take the color and flavor out of things.

The French say: "Small gifts keep friendship alive." Yes, but only if the recipient shows pleasure and grateful response. How often you and I have experienced the sad flatness of planning a little surprise for someone who received it with apathy! The bringing of a gift that elicited a "Oh, thanks—but I have plenty of these already."

One vows in one's heart never again to give anything to that thankless person!

Of course, we do not deal out favors with the idea of being thanked. But nothing so chills the heart and dampens the ardor of service as indifference on the part of those we have tried to please.

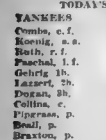
St. Petersburg, Fla., March 9—The crucial series of the flitting spring starts today. The Braves play the Yankees the first of a five-game melee, which will eventually settle the championship of St. Petersburg.



Nick Flatley

The Braves, beaten in the series last year, want to get even in this one, and probably will. The Yanks have anything like the fire and condition that's part of the Tribe already. It will be a more or less important occasion, as it will give everybody a chance to see that Ruth is hitting with himself as regards baseball training. The big boy has been working out every day, but the real "low down" can only be collected when he's paying under pressure.

Babe hasn't gained more than a couple of pounds since he rambled South, which proves better than anything else that he is seriously after a good year. He has been leading a good life and all that, but hasn't under-planing, weak a year ago, will get a real test in the sand hills of Waterfront Park.

HUGGINS EXPERIMENTING.

Miller Huggins is experimenting with a lot of new ball players, while the Braves are practically set. The New York novices will find themselves stacked against a pretty tough proposition.

Manager Barney has tossed his line-up around for the entire week. He has taken Lazzeri out and put Speedy Frank Wilson in right field. Frank will bat second, after Dauvrau. Ed Brown will follow, and Burrus will hold forth in the clean up position.

Rixeda, who shows ability to soak as the days whiz by has been moved up to fifth and Benny has brought Bernie Neis and himself down just before the pitchers. This figures this divides the speed and punch equally throughout the line-up. There's a batting kick all around this Spring, which is as it should be.

Dick Rudolph, who observes things like that, thinks that the needed soak has been put into the team.

The tribal athletes are all in pretty good shape now, and did not work out this morning, excepting a few of the late arrivals who still need to get their wind fixed up. There was no practice yesterday morning on account of the wind and chill that followed a Sunday ram.

SAVING HURLERS.

A long session was staged in the afternoon, but no scrub game was played as Barney didn't want to take any chances with the arms of his pitchers. The boys are ready, also of them, and chucking in the cold to exit, unless absolutely necessary. Manager Dave thinks so much of his regular pitchers that he will chase in the kids in the exhibition games, even if that makes him forego his ambition to win 'em all.

Larry Benton, Johnny Cooney and Kyle Graham were elected to do the chucking this afternoon, weather and everything being suitable. Kyle had a slight cold last week, but has recovered and needs the game stuff to help him in the battle for control, which is his big job this Spring.

If the long young man ever gets so that he can put the ball where it should go, he'll be one of the best in the business. And the boys who are catching think he'll be that way before the northern hike is ordered three weeks hence.

CATON, HORSEMAN AND FRIEND OF CZAR, DIES

TWO TEAMS TIE FOR LEAD IN N. Y. RACE

New York, March 9 (A.P.)—The teams of Stockelynch-Goosens and Walker-McBeth were tying the field in the six-day bicycle race at Madison Square Garden at the end of the thirty-fifth hour at 8 a. m. today. They had pedaled 583 miles and eight laps.

One lap to the rear were the teams of McNamara-Georgetti, Beckman-Stockholm, Sargent Faudet, Coburn-Peard and Grimm-Winter. The Walthour-Horan team was two laps behind. The combinations of Spencer-Benezatto, Lequesney-Wambst, Go a Mieto-Ira Paton, Taylor-Hanley, Keller-Koeckler and Bello-Costello were three laps behind the leaders. The Maiden-Fenn team is tied, four laps to go.

The record for the thirty-fifth hour is 754 miles and nine laps, made by Cameron and Kaiser in 1915.

UMPS MUST BAN RESIN AT A. L. TRAINING CAMPS

CONWAY WITH SOX

Sunday Baseball Boom. Gaston Case Vital. Secret of Control.

By JACK CONWAY

NEW ORLEANS, La., March 9.—Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, the Maharaja Jam of baseball told me he would like to see Massachusetts vote for Sunday professional baseball.

He was greatly interested when I told him the matter would go before the voters in the form of a referendum at the Pasadena on "The Red Sox and Braves would each have twelve to fourteen Sunday games. That would mean increased revenue for the clubs, which would enable them to go out and purchase star ball players.

Jack Conway.

"Sunday baseball in Massachusetts would give thousands of persons who cannot now see the game an opportunity to see major league clubs perform. Years ago there was considerable opposition to Sunday baseball, but people have found in the places where Sunday ball has been legalized that the sport helps the community."

BOB QUINN has asked Landis to make a ruling which will prohibit players sold to major league clubs where the minor league organization has an agreement to pay the player a percentage of the purchase price. The case of Alan Gaston, Sox catcher, hinged upon this act.

When Gaston signed with Toledo last Spring the American Association club agreed to pay from 15 per cent of all over $4,000 it received in the event he was sold to a major league team. The Sox paid $4,000 and gave two players, Hoyt and Connolly, for Gaston. The Toledo club has refused to pay Gaston anything on the ground it only got $4,000 for him.

Quinn has requested that Landis place a value on all ball players involved in deals in the future. Bob says he would rate Hoyting and Connolly each as being worth $4,000 which would entitle Gaston to 15 per cent, of $8,000 which would be $1,200.

"UNLESS values are put on players involved in deals men coming up from the minors will figure that baseball magnates are a lot of crooks," said Quinn.

* * *

JACK RYAN and Bob Coleman are devoting a great deal of time to coaching the youthful Red Sox flingers. These veterans usually don big suits as soon as the Spring practice each day. They have stolen a page from Howard Ehmke's book and instruct the youngsters to first master control before they attempt to dazzle the world with their trick curves and twisters.

HELEN WILLS IS SUFFERING FROM COLD

Nice, France, March 9 (A.P.)—Miss Helen Wills is suffering from a severe cold and decided not to play today in the Nice lawn tennis tournament, in which she is entered in the singles and mixed doubles. She plans to play three matches tomorrow.

Nice, March 9 (I.N.S.)—Miss Helen Wills entered enemy territory today, when she arrived here to play upon the court where Suzanne Langlen has reigned queen for so many years.

Miss Wills will play in the singles on the Nice courts for the first time, but Mlle. Langlen is absent and the hopes that those two would stage another great tennis battle here have long since been dashed.

Some of Miss Wills' friends fear that she is going stale, for her game yesterday against Senorita Alvarez of Spain was not up to her usual standard. She slowed up her pace considerably, played a baseline game and refused to go to the net and was generally listless. It is hoped that the rest today may bring a return to form.

The 118-pound class entries are Tony Travino, Arthur Kehane, and Jimmy Corcoran, while the 126 division is set with Al DeAngelos, Frank Romano, George Russo and Jack Kosher.

Training Camp News

Jimmy Fox one of the most promising young Athletics is nursing a knee injury received recently in practice at Fort Myers. Joe Hauser's bad knee seems to be well again as he is working out daily.

The Phillies are rapidly rounding into form for Wednesday, and are playing practicing practice games each day. Pitchers Weiland, Ring and Carlson are due to see us well.

Manager Rowther, Senator holdout, having signed his contract the champions' roster is now complete. Harry Kelly, Mal Smith and Jim Lyle have been showing up very nicely in recent workouts.

Manager Bill McKechnie of the Pittsburgh Pirates is lining up his first and second teams for the seven inter-team games which start tomorrow at the Pasadena training camp.

A mimeoed diamond failed to halt Cleveland's practice at Lakeland. Manager Fowler leading his charges through a stiff workout in spite of the unfavorable conditions. Ray Benge, a right handed recruit, is doing well.

Eddie Collins is awaiting the arrival of four members at Shreveport. They are Ted Blankenship, Hollis Thurston, Earl Sheely and Willie Kamm. They are expected any moment.

Rogers Hornsby, Detroit slugger, has arrived at Augusta and donned his uniform. He will work for the twirlers.

The Chicago Cubs have returned to Catalina Island after three games with Los Angeles.

The practice of the St. Louis Browns was prevented by a chilly wind.

BE A BOSTON BOOSTER

New Attack Made on Sunday Baseball

WASHINGTON, March 9 (A.P.).—The campaign to drive Sunday baseball out of Washington has been renewed on Capitol Hill. Various reform societies and other groups are urging the committees and individual members of Congress to make a sweeping revision of the city's Sunday activities.

They have received no assurance of action, but the list of pending blue law proposals is growing constantly. One introduced by Representative Edwards, Democrat, Georgia, would close Sunday theatres, public dance halls, and all "other places where commercialized sports and amusements are carried on."

Welsh Refuses to Sign; Threatens to Go Home

By NICK FLATLEY.

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 9.—Jimmy Welsh, Brave right fielder, threatens to desert the ball club and return to his home in California. Jimmy is a holdout, and refused to sign his contract when he arrived at camp, although he had been wired by Judge Fuchs not to come unless he was willing to agree to terms.

Welsh failed to come to any understanding with the Judge, after a two hour conference late yesterday afternoon. He thinks he's worth more than the club is offering him, and says he will quit baseball if he doesn't get his price.

The difference between the club and the player is merely nominal and something like a thousand dollars, but the Brave officials became peeved when they thought that Welsh was assuming too dictatorial an attitude.

They promised by wire that they would give him the raise he wanted provided he delivered during the coming campaign, the decision to be left solely to the judgment of Manager Bancroft. The player thinks that he should have it in black and white, however.

Chances are that he will eventually sign. He's young and has a great baseball future ahead. Last year was his first in the big show and he played the difficult sun field at the wigwam very acceptably and hit better than .300 two fine stunts for a novice.

Welsh came to the club from the Pacific Coast League, the Braves paying $50,000 for him.

He had a bad side when he joined the team last Spring but looked so good despite the handicap that the money was handed over. He claims to be in perfect trim this year, and looks it.

After the conference yesterday, Judge Fuchs dictated a long letter to Welsh setting forth the club's views, and telling him that if he did not sign, he must leave the training camp.

Jimmy immediately started to pack up, and telephoned for a railroad reservation back to the western slopes. He reconsidered before train time and decided to think things over this morning and give a final decision.

The club owners claim that they will not give in a bit and the athlete says the same thing. Some compromise can be expected, for the player is too good to let loose, from the club's side, and the game is the big chance, from the holdout's viewpoint.

MULLOWNEY IS LOST TO B. C. SEXTET

The Boston College hockey team will be without the services of Eddie Mullowney, its big defence man, for the remainder of the ice season. Big Ed suffered a bad cut on his knee in the recent Boston College-Boston University game. It happened in the midst of scrimmage, and was inflicted accidentally by one of his own team.

Mullowney will be unable to play baseball until the Southern trip begins and he will have to make that in more or less weak condition. His loss to the ball team will be felt, as the Brookline boy was expected to be the mainstay of the pitching corps this year.

The Eagle hockey team will have two more games, one of them with the Boston University team and the other will with one of the club sextets. In addition to Eddie Mullowney, the Eagles will probably be without the services of Frank Mahoney, the other heavyweight defence man. Frank has been sick for the past month.

The weakened Eagles will have to face the Terriers in the rubber game of their series with the chances all in favor of the Terriers.

Tunney to Go Thro' With Bout

New York, March 9 (I.N.S.)—According to professional assurances from the source of supply, Gene Tunney and Young Stribling really intend to step three ten, no-decision rounds at Miami, Fla., on Friday night, thereby fooling some of the people all of the time.

A Tunney-Stribling bout, according to the best of local minds, should be a Broadway attraction.

SHARKEY AND VACCA LEAVE FOR COAST SOON

Johnny Buckley, box fighting manager, was on the receiving end of three round trip tickets from Los Angeles, Promoter H. A. Wadhams of the Pacific Coast is anxious to get the services of Jack Sharkey, New England heavyweight champion and Johnny Vacca, lightweight champion of Brighton, and in communication with Buckley the latter informed him to send the three round trip tickets and that the Boston trio would remain a month.

Sharkey is slated to box Gorilla Godfrey on the Coast in April, while Vacca is to be matched against the best available lads in that section.

The Boston trio, Buckley, Sharkey and Vacca, will leave Boston on Sunday, March 21.

FITTONS FACE Y. M. H. A. QUINTET ON THURSDAY

The league-leading Fitton K. of C basketball team will face the Y. M. H. A. quintet in a Greater Boston League contest Thursday night at Columbus Hall, East Boston. Coach "Snappy" O'Connell said that he would stand pat on his line-up, Henry Mack, Tommy O'Rourke, Irwin, Thompson and Wattara complete the Noddle Island outfit.

President Joseph Corbett may arrange a series whereby the Fittons will play the New York champions if they are victorious in the second half. Plans were made so that the winner of the first and second halves of the circuit would play a five-game series, but the Fittons knocked them a rib in the air by annexing the title all-year round.

Bruins Tackle New York Sextet at Arena Tonight

LOCAL SIX READY FOR HARD TILT

Americans Now at Top of Game and Should Extend Rossmen to Limit

By BILL GRIMES

Another capacity crowd will greet the Bruins when they tackle the New York Americans this evening at the Boston Arena. Since the Boston boys started their sensational spurt they have become the best drawing cards on the N. H. L. circuit.

Since their last appearance here, the New York Americans have greatly improved in their play. The Bruins tendered the Broadwaytes a bad beating in New York a couple of weeks ago, but immediately after that the New Yorkers pulled themselves together and have been upsetting the league standing by knocking off team after team, and the natives expect a royal battle.

The game is one of the most important on the Bruins' schedule. They have been through a hard week, but the players will get a pace for the New York outfit faster and more dazzling than any they have shown this year.

Billy Burch and the two Greens — the boys who will be closely guarded by the Bruins. Burch has completely recovered from the staleness which threw him off his game for about five weeks and once again he is the clever, dangerous Billy Burch of old. The Green brothers are a pair of the best wing men in the N. H. L.

The Bruins will have their full strength on the ice. Red Stuart, who was forced out of the Ottawa game last Saturday because of three major fouls, will be back at it.

"Dead Shot" Carson Cooper will be watched carefully by the New York players. "Coop" is one of the leading scorers in the N. H. L. and the Gotham players know that if they allow Cooper to be uncovered that the lightening fast Herberts to Cooper combination will speed defeat for them.

ST. MARY'S TO PLAY CHELSEA K. OF C. TONIGHT

The St. Mary's Catholic Association basketball five will line up against the strong Chelsea Knights of Columbus team at St. Mary's Gym tonight. This will be the first time these two teams have come together this year, as the Chelsea K. C. disconinued in the first half of the Greater Boston League forfeiting the games in that half to the local team.

FUGAZY ARRANGING BROOKLYN PROGRAMS

New York, March 9 (A.P.)—Humbert J. Fugazy, a promoter who surprized boxing followers by taking in $300,000 at the Yankee Stadium when Harry Greb and Mickey Walker fought there last Summer, is said to be arranging some strong programs for Ebbets Field in Brooklyn this year.

Harvard Notes

Jack Mallck of Framingham is the leading man for the position of captain of next year's basketball five. Mallck played through the present season with little substitution and has been the main cog in Coach Ed Walters five.

The Harvard Freshman five will be without the services of Robinson, regular guard, when the yearlings go up against the Yale Freshmen at New Haven Saturday. Robinson has been under the faculty ban and Coach Sanborn has played Bill Ketcham in his position at guard.

Coach Eddie Farrell of the new champion team was more than pleased with the conditions at New York Friday and was thinking of his own competitors, but of the Harvard opposition.

The track team will take a short rest until Monday, April 5, when practice will be resumed on the cinder track in the stadium. Coach Farrell during that time would like very much to have several freshmen join his amazingly small freshman squad.

Captain Read and eleven veterans of last year's lacrosse team have started active practice which will continue throughout the week. The first meet is scheduled for April 15 when the Orsmen will meet the combined team of Oxford and Cambridge Universities.

The veterans of the lacrosse team are Captain Read, Brown, Gillies, Kelsey, Lawrence, Lynn, Murphy, Noble, Simpson, Sadler, Warren and Watson.

Big Baseball Series Starts Thursday

"A GREAT idea"! That's the way that Fred Mitchell, head coach of baseball at Harvard, endorses the Boston Evening American series on college baseball secrets, which will begin on Thursday. "It ought to help out the grammar and high school kids a lot," said Mitchell. "They can pick up plenty of pointers on how to play the different positions from the American's articles," said Fred as he read the manuscripts of first few on the list.

Norman George to Enter Pennsylvania

NORMAN GEORGE, holder of the New England Preparatory School 600-yard indoor track record, will matriculate at Pennsylvania next Fall.

He is a Brookline youth who is now attending Mosses & Brown. While performing a t the 11th carnival at the Army Armory recently George was clocked in 1.23 earning his own record.

Last year he wore the Forder Point School colors and shattered the 600-yard mark, running over the distance in 1 minute 34 4-5 seconds. Staging a hectic comeback against hardly any opposition whatsoever the Brookline sensation succeeded in improving upon his own record.

Writing over the board track like a well oiled machine George proved that there was as much difference between him and other contestants as their is between chicken salad and chicken pox.

However, George stood head and shoulders over the field of starters in the 600-yard event and many of the experts commented on his brilliant performance. Penn should welcome this athlete with open

LYNN ENGLISH DIAMOND SQUAD HARD AT WORK

By EDDIE DONDERO

George Sexton, Lynn English athletic director, was approached by a squad of baseball candidates one clear day last week. Every youth demanded Spring training just as all the big leaguers do

With their heads new baseball paraphernalia they paraded up to the boss, asking him to commence practice at once.

Following the coach's permission, the advance guard started to break their new mitts in. Ever since that day Workouts have been held after the high school gymnasium or outdoors Mr. Sexton said that he wished to keep heading the varsity squad across the sport pages in forming the public how the rookies and regulars shape up at their respective training quarters.

This made them wonder why they were idle. The weather was blistering and Joe Duffy, a member of all keystone stick gang, put the proposition before the boss, who paved the road of Mr. Duffy.

The ambitious Lynn contingent has enough veterans to clinch the North Shore League diamond championship. Phil Waldman, Cy Morgan and Jack Gibbons are a trio of moundsmen who have made early preparations for the coming season. Waldman is one of the greatest curve ball twirlers in schoolboy range.

Morgan and Gibbons also made such a quick success on the rubber and both can make a baseball do the limbo.

Ed Anglin is listed to do the bulk of the receiving and Coach Sexton expects to call a conference of newly appointed catchers to the staff for relief duties. Hart is apt to be found covering an old first base with Capt. Fogarty at second.

A battle for the shortstop berth is now being waged between Taylor and Sweeney, who are mighty good fielders. Hymanson is a fixture at the hot corner.

The loss of three gardeners through graduation gives the choice of the vacancies to Ward and Addison who were substitutes a year ago. They saw plenty of action last season and beside being heavy hitters both fly hawks can certainly go and get 'em in the orchard.

Another outfielder has yet to be selected but the race for the letter will be complete. An opening game is pending and if it is arranged, the Lynn outfit will open its 1926 season long before any other school.

THE first article in a new series of tennis by Helen Wills is to appear on these pages tomorrow. Every tennis player and everyone who has read of this American girl's wonderful campaign on the courts of the Riviera will want to follow this series closely.

Dick Murphy Rates Our Hurdlers Best

This is the fourth of a series of articles on the hurdles as told by John P. (Dick) Murphy of Boston College, a joint holder of the indoor world record for the 45-yard high hurdles, New England A. A. A. U. 45-yard indoor hurdle champion and New England intercollegiate 120-yard high hurdle champion. These articles will appear exclusively in the Boston Evening American.

By DICK MURPHY
As Told to Bill Considine

AMERICA will head the hurdling lists for many years to come if the timber toppers in th s country continue to come forward and dev p in the same manner they have done in other years. There are more star hurdlers in the States than in all the rest of the world taken as a unit. The United States leads in high hurdlers, low hurdlers, short distance hurdlers, long distance hurdlers, indoor and outdoor hurdlers.

Of course other nations have been represented by star hurdlers, but never have they had such a galaxy of stars in the timber topping event as the United States has had. Earl Thomson was a Canadian by name, but a phenom in hurdling ability was developed in the United States under United States supervision.

Thompson has gone on his way and I often think come to hold the high honors for a while and then give way to still younger men. That's the way of the world in everything, and it goes in the hurdle game.

At the present time F. Morgan Taylor is without doubt the best of the American indoor high hurdlers.

His work the past Winter has been of high order. He runs for the Illinois A. C. and is well remembered for a work in the Olympic as one of his indoor races of the past few months. Just who is second to Taylor is a tough one to answer.

I THINK Carl Christenson of the Newark A. C. is the second best in the indoor high hurdles. He usually trails the great Taylor and occasionally tone him in a race or two. Charlie Moore of Penn State would be a good third man, with Wolf of the University of Pennsylvania as the fourth-greatest indoor high hurd er.

I saw in the paper the other day that Fred Robben of the A. A. U. named Taylor as the All-American amateur hurdler, and Charlie Moore as the best of the college stick jumpers of the past year.

In the outdoor hurdles, I think that timber of Ohio state is easily the best. He was a place man in the Olympics and moreover won the National A. A. A. U. title last July in 14 4-10 seconds. That is "some" for the 120-yard hurdles. Hugo Leistner from Leland Stanford University is probably the second best man. He has done 14 8-10 seconds, but in the final of the Nationals he was forced to take a second place to Guthrie. Leistner won the National Collegiates last year, I think.

After Leistner and Guthrie, I would rate Christenson of the Newark A. C., Charlie Moore of Penn State and Snyder of Ohio State. These latter three are on a par. The whole group represents the cream of the present American high hurdlers.

I raced against Lord David Burghley, the English nobleman who made an athletic invasion of the United States last Spring. Lord Burghley did not fare so well in American competition. He was the quarter-mile hurdles, but his time was only fair, somewhere in the neighborhood of 57 seconds, I think.

In the shorter distance high hurdles, Lo l Burghley's best time was about 15 seconds. Americans are doing 14 4-10, so you can see just how much better the Yankees are than the English in the hurdles.

OF course, Burghley's racing may have been affected by the reception that he received in this country. He came over to run, an athletic invasion you might call it, but before he was through he must have thought that it was a social invasion. He was "Twyte" to all the kids in Philly during his stay. I guess he drew more hands during his two weeks in America than he had shaken in the whole of his twenty years in England.

Lord Burghley was a good scout, one of the best fellows that I ever met. They tell me that he is going to join the Army, in the Grenadier Guards. He ought to make a good soldier. He was a good fellow and a good athlete.

See tomorrow's paper for the concluding story in this series.

JOE STECHER'S OPPONENT IS NOT KNOWN

By RINGSIDE.

Joe Stecher is coming to town either late today or the first thing tomorrow.

Stecher is to meet the great unknown on Thursday night in Boston Arena, St Botolph street. In the feature bout of an all star wrestling card.

There are only a few persons who actually know the least idea who Stecher's opponent may be. The champion has not the least idea who might be tossed in the ring with him and Promoter Bowser has no means to wish to train for the match.

Some few seasons ago Promoter Paul Bowser trotted an unknown matmen into the ring at the Grand Opera House to meet Nat Pendleton. At the time only knew what it was all about was Pendleton was to meet Bowser tossed John Pesek into the ring and the battle was on.

So here is to get the money that is to say, he is coming here for a guarantee of $12 500 and is to meet anybody that Bowser may select as his opponent.

There will be a trio of bouts besides the main attraction. A ex Lurdon is to be pitted against Leone, Labrosse, Theodore Gauvreau Stecher champion, meets Stanley Stasiak.

Frank Yunko and Renato Gardini will meet in the other bout. A curtain raiser will find Sam Skorsky attempting to down the mighty Ruth Bath.

INSIDE GOLF

By CHESTER R. HORTON

Automatic control of the distance back you take the club is largely maintained in the arms and is controlled through application of the arms to the back swing in the right place. This immediately gets down to the start of the back swing, a part of the golf swing on which I continually put great stress because it is right at the start is right the whole swing is likely to be right, but if you start with a wrong start the swing can never correct itself as it goes. Thus, we shove off with the clubhead, then let the club describe a circling movement to the right. The next thing to how into a stretching out of the left arm. Reach away out with it as far as you can go without overdoing it, and without pulling yourself off your balance. As you reach out with the shoulder turns to the right and the club goes up and around. This reaching out will exert an influence that will arrest the club at the right place at the top, as will be explained next.

HANEY BATTLES FOR JOB AT NEW ORLEANS

By JACK CONWAY

New Orleans, La., March 9.—Fred Haney, former Tuxes, found it easier to get by Geygan Dexter and Jimmy Geygan shooting for his third base job when he reported for the first practice with the Pelicans.

Fred was in his best form at the bat, but heavy as he was, showed signs of drives hit his way at the keystone sack.

Fred is trying fielding practice with the extra weight, Haney is not used third base at a premium.

Before going to the ball park he held a conference with Bob Quinn, president of the major details in regard to the signing of a contract were discussed.

Lee Fohl refused to give Haney an uniform until he got word from Quinn that Haney was prepared to sign the contract. Fohl and Quinn have had a policy that has proved successful to let players report with their ball signed a contract. As a result, there isn't any holding out in camp. The boys are now devoting all of their attention to getting into form as they have settled their business affairs with the club.

FIGHT FOR SECOND.

Besides the battle for the third base job, there is another little battle on for second base where Lonnie Mitchell and "Mule" Herrera are expected to rival Johnny Evers stuff for the bag.

Mitchell looks like a finished fielder, while he snapped up well at the bat. Herrera is not as good a fielder as McCann, but he has a healthier kick at the ball at this stage of the game.

Fohl is leaning towards McCann, but Herrera may make him change his mind before the season opens.

Lee is devoting a great deal of time to batting practice. He is aware of the fact that in there this year which can knock base runners off third and second. He hasn't any use seeing on which he can do their hitting when there isn't anybody on base.

GASTON JOINS COACHES.

Alex Gaston, star catcher with Toledo last year and who shapes up as a fine hitting backstop for the Sox, has been pressed into service to aid Jack Ryan, Bob Coleman and Lee Fohl in coaching some of the younger flingers. Gaston has had a great deal of experience in the game and a minor leagues and could be able to give the rookie pitchers some valuable tips.

Del Lundgren, a right hander who was with the Birmingham club last season, looks particularly good. He has already mastered control and has built up considerable stuff on the ball.

Fohl announced he would stage a practice game today between the Regulars and Yanigans. This will give him another opportunity to see how some of his young players are when under fire.

The Making of a Husband, Interesting Serial on Problems of Married Life, by Ann Lisle

By Ann Lisle

BUT Jim wasn't watching Jeanie.

He was watching me. And his eyes were so full of a command and of preoccupied intentness that he didn't see any of the signals I was trying to wig-wag him with drooping lashes and scowling brows.

"Anne is my wife. She married me 'for better for worse'—and when she made her vows she meant them," Jim said softly. "Your distinction pride was affronted at the idea of having me mixed up with—unsavory doings. I knew it would be. I was even afraid you would try to influence Anne against me—"

"I did," Jeanie broke in.

This time there was the equivalent of a "dimple" in her voice. Jim's preoccupation made him unaware even of this.

"But she stood by," he said proudly. "And now let's put our bygones into the bygone class and leave 'em there. For some merciful reason you're all ready to forget and for give—as Anne has done—"

"Are you sure she has?" Jeanie doubted.

"Of course," Jim began, but again Jeanie broke in with a quick

"Are you sure there was anything for her to forgive?"

Even then Jim didn't realize where she was driving. I've never before seen him so tired, so distraught and so dense. Put of course it really couldn't possibly have occurred to him that inside of a year's time Lucie Tremaine would divorce Johnny, marry Matt Hawley, get hold of the truth about Brooks De Courcy and come to Jeanie with it. And how else was Jeanie to come by the truth of an ugly story he had gone to such lengths to keep her from suspecting? So—hiding his head under the sand as ostriches probably never do!—Jim said in the most innocent, childish tone in the world

"Why, how did you get this sudden broad-mindedness, Jeanie'?"

Times are changing," she answered airily. "There are worse things than what Anne has to forgive."

"She was frightfully humiliated by my—dancing attendance on Irene De Courcy," Jim said stiffly. "You must not belittle Anne's generosity, nor fail to see that her attitude toward me was tenderly-solicitous precisely what I counted on having it."

"You sound like a maxim out of the copybooks of our childhood," Jeanie giggled. "'Do right and fear no man'—or some such noble saying seems about to trip off your tongue. Times have changed, James. Really there was nothing so terrible in your attitude toward the fair—"

"Jeanie!" objected Jim explosively. "I won't have you talking so lightly of sacred things."

"Yet this is precisely the good humored detachment you'd like me to show if—Pat had strayed," Jeanie said still more lightly.

But something in her tone arrested Jim's attention.

"What are you saying," he demanded.

"That I know," Jeanie repeated simply.

Jim's eyes darkened. His brows lowered. His voice hoarsened with anger as he turned to me expressing his feelings at the obvious conclusion he had drawn.

"So you told her?" he accused. "After all the efforts I made to protect her, you had to tell her at last. What goodness your making up when you know there is nothing to forgive, Jeanie? None of this has been in good faith. You're calmly laughing at me now. You haven't any real sense of right or wrong. I'm disgusted with the two of you—"

"Oh—are you?" said Jeanie with acrid archness.

I followed her narrowed, scornful eyes. And in that moment Arlette Valleau came into the room bearing the coffee urn. She smiled up at Jim innocently as she sent a greeting to Jeanie and me and appended it with a shy remark, addressed right to him:

"It's time we had our coffee, isn't it?" asked Arlette.

The temperature of the studio of the Bitches went down to a few degrees below zero as Arlette Valleau brought in the coffee with a shy remark addressed to Jim. I have never seen anyone turn to steel more rapidly than Jeanie did when she realized that Arlette was calmly telling Jim that it was high time they had their coffee.

"I don't think I care for any breakfast," said Jeanie stiffly.

My appetite is about gone, too," Jim announced.

Mine was by no means ravenous at this stage of the game. But matters were in such a state that I felt they really couldn't remain as bad as they seemed. So I said at a venture:

"Is Harmsow still out in the kitchen, Arlette?"

"He have go," she remarked complacently. "I have tell him how it is that Zeke Schmidt he cannot walk at all until he have the big peavypole. I get from his friends what work by lor-jams. And so Tarsaeur ..e go to take to Zeke what it is I have go get for him. With the woolen stocking and the stick with the sharp end, and the boots that lace so thick and so tight, I think Zeke he get out so soon as the snowdrift go away leetle bit."

Jeanie gave Arlette a long look. The lengthy and ingenuous explanation evidently did not make much impression on my sister-in-law.

She addressed Arlette with the greatest possible severity:

"Mr. Parry was frightfully worried about you," she said coldly. "Do you think you have a right to go off on such long jaunts when you know perfectly well that the old housekeeper is so busy taking care of the Lingard man that she simply has to neglect her master?"

"Mrs. Cruikshank she never neglect Mister Nicholas," Arlette objected. "And always I do just what it is Mister Nicholas he have tell me. But Zeke Schmidt he is very dond. He have really the very great fondness for Zeke. He have think of it that it would be good I shall go get the peavy for to be cut so it shall make Zeke the fire cans to go by Winter ices. He have sent me because I speak the French like the men that make the logrines. Perhaps he forget that by the blizzard it is not easy to get out from the North woods."

"Indeed," said Jeanie severely, seating herself tentatively at the breakfast table, where Jim had also sulkily arranged himself. "And how did you—get out of the woods?"

Ice Cream Should Be a Regular Part of Your Diet, Says Dr. Reed

By Dr. Charles A. L. Reed, M. D.,
Former President of the American Medical Association

ICE CREAM should be a regular part of your diet, but the bacterial content of some ice cream is very high.

Recent years have seen much improvement in the sanitation of plants and the sterilization of utensils and machinery, but not enough attention has been given to the various ingredients. The cream is often an old product rejected by milk dealers, and during hot spells it is derived from distant sources where inspection is not so rigid.

Condensed milk, milk powder, gelatine, fresh fruits and even flavors may contain quantities of bacteria and even colon bacilli. The completed mixture should be properly pasteurized before freezing.

It is permitted that the cream may be treated by "flash" pasteurization to preserve it in transit if it is afterwards properly pasteurized as part of the mixture.

Ice cream can be pasteurized at higher temperatures than milk because it is not necessary to preserve the cream line.

One hundred and fifty degrees F. for 30 minutes will destroy all pathogenic organisms if subsequent contamination be eliminated.

Where human hands are used, the workers should be examined for typhoid or other infective organisms.

Concerning oysters and other bivalves, many typhoid outbreaks have been traced directly to infected oysters. The best way in which local State and municipal health officers can control their oysters is to require all shippers to produce reports from the local and State officials at the place of production that the oysters conform to a proper standard of purity.

Oysters are often contaminated in packing and shucking establishments where there is a danger from typhoid carriers.

A process is desirable whereby both the shell and the shucked oysters may be purified by some means such as washing or chlorination. This would, to a large extent supersede the inspection and control necessary at the place of production.

Contamination of fruits and vegetables usually occurs during handling. Only a few specimens are infected and the infection does not multiply much.

Cases of infectious disease from this source are usually isolated and hard to connect with the source of infection, especially since this food is distributed promiscuously and few people stick to one particular retailer.

Bacteriological examination is of no value. Bacillus coli may come from the soil, from handling or from contaminated ice. A careful and thorough washing, especially in hot water, is the best method of removing the contaminations, which are largely superficial.

In carbonated beverages the water supply must be pure and the utensils and containers properly cleaned and sterilized before they are filled.

A 4 per cent. solution of sodium hydroxide at 130 F. for five minutes should then be rinsed in pure water and filled.

Carbonic acid gas and the saccharine that is often used are unfavorable to the multiplication of bacteria.

Maria Jeritza Tells How to Have Lovely Hands in Spring

Maria Jeritza

"MY hands have never been 'in such dreadful condition'. What woman has . . . this remark or heard . . . to her friends during the past Winter! Due perhaps to the general use of soft coal, the air has been filled with soot in most cities and towns, which penetrates everywhere, and where ever it settles, leaves a trace of greasy grime.

For this reason, hands have to be scrubbed every hour or two in order to keep even fairly clean. As a result the natural oil gets washed out of the skin, which becomes gritty and hard.

Surely the sensation of possessing rough palms and fingertips is about as disagreeable and nerve-wracking as any of the minor ills of life. To touch even a piece of satin or fine silk under these circumstances is maddening. For the sake of your disposition as well as your household peace, seek speedy relief for this roughened dried condition of your skin.

It is true the worst of Winter is now over. But Spring winds may prove just as devastating as Winter cold unless you take sensible care and protective measures to guard the loveliness and comfort of your hands.

As in all beauty measures, prevention is better than cure when it comes to care of the hands.

Wash out that shabby pair of fabric gloves you wore about to discard. Wear them whenever you have dusting or other grimy work to do.

Get, also, a pair of rubber gloves at the drug store.

At first you may find it clumsy to use gloves in doing your housework, but you will soon get used to them and they protect the hands marvelously. A pair of rubber gloves will last a long time provided you don't cut or prick them with a sharp point.

Choose soap for your hands that is mild enough to use on a baby's skin. Fill your clean basin with warm, not hot soap-suds, softened by a few drops of lemon juice or a pinch of borax.

Give your hands a thorough cleansing. A mere dabbing only grinds in the dirt and makes them rougher. Rinse them in a second bowl of clean, softened water. Dry them carefully, pressing back the cuticle about the nails with your towel.

Finally, rub in the hand lotion that best agrees with your skin, whether it be old-fashioned mutton tallow or some such softening and bleaching mixture as the following:

Rosewater	4 ounces
Glycerine	1 ounce
Benzoin	½ ounce
Carbolic acid	3 drops

If your hands are too fat, doubtless, your entire body is fat and you need to practice reducing measures and dieting. For the hands indicate accurately the shape of the body.

To slenderize your hands, massage them daily by rubbing each hand with the thumb and fingers of the other hand from wrist to finger points, ending with a decided pinch of each fingertip.

No matter what your occupation is, by taking sensible care of your hands systematically every day, you can keep them as lovely as white waxen camellias.

Fashions and Fancies

THERE'S Many a Slip 'twixt the frock and step-in, but this is the season when costume slips and step-ins were planned in matched sets. This latest novelty in lingerie sets is developed in dark shades of silk for day-time use and in all the soft pastel shades of georgette for evening wear.

The last straw that no fair from "breaking the camel's back" doesn't even prove a burden around the neck and wrists of the wearer, is the ruffle cuff and collar set that Paris has just introduced for wear upon the simple jersey sports frock. Of natural color straw, such a set is embroidered in bright colors.

Striking a sombre note among the gayety of the soft pastel shades so popular this season, the black gown appears for all functions after sunset. Formal and informal modes, in all black or in black over nude, are developed of filmy lace, chiffon, georgette, crepe romo, as well as non-transparent fabrics such as taffeta and satin.

TAKE SALTS IF STOMACH ISN'T ACTING RIGHT

Says Indigestion Results from an Excess of Hydrochloric Acid

Undigested food delayed in the stomach decays, or rather ferments, the same as food left in the open air, says a noted authority. He also tells us that Indigestion is caused by Hyperacidity, meaning there is an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach which prevents complete digestion and starts food fermentation. Thus everything eaten sours in the stomach much like garbage sours in a can, forming acrid fluids and gases which irritate the stomach like a toy balloon. Then we feel a heavy, lumpy misery in the chest; we belch up gas; we eructate sour food or have heartburn, flatulence, waterbrash or nausea.

He tells us to lay aside all digestive acids and instead get from any pharmacy four ounces of Jad Salts and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and drink it while it is effervescing, and furthermore, to continue this for a week. While relief often follows the first dose, it is important to help neutralize the acidity, remove the gas-making mass, start the liver, stimulate the kidneys and thus promote a free flow of pure digestive juices.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and sodium phosphate. This harmless salts is used for many stomach disorders with excellent results.

Love Story of a Boston Girl

to ask none—that was the way to hold him, she figured, by never letting him feel the weight of the marriage chains that held him to her.

When he came into the little room with its old blue silk curtains and softly tinted walls, she was standing in front of her mirror, brushing her dark hair and lazily humming.

"Hello darling" she said to him, and smiled at him over her bare shoulder, with her flirt's eyes.

She could tell, by the sharp look he gave her in the mirror, that he hadn't expected this sort of welcome. She had surprised him.

What he had expected, she told herself, was to be cross-questioned about that kiss that Fay had given him as they tangoed together, or else to be scolded because he hadn't come home to dinner.

There was a baffled, puzzled look in his face as he went about the room hanging up his clothes and putting the buttons in his clean shirt for the morning.

Sylvia took it out of his hand and smiled up at him radiantly. "I'll do that for you Ran dan," she said to him, "that's what a wife's for, isn't it, to look after her lord and mas.er's clothes for him?"

Ranny Begins

He looked solemnly at her with that same baffled gaze.

"Search me," he said, "but there's one thing I wish you would do. I wish you'd keep the house locked up with gingerale and some things from the delicatessen for lunches. You should have had something ready to serve tonight," He frowned.

Sylvia just couldn't let that pass without saying a word to defend herself.

"But, darling, I did—I had the nicest little dinner in the world all ready for you at six o'clock," she began, and I hadn't any idea that you were going to bring anyone home with you——"

Ranny broke in with a snort of laughter. "Yeah, that's right! Start to razz me for something that wasn't my fault!" he said bitterly. "I couldn't help bringing Fay and Bodie home with me. They just hung themselves on me and what could I do about it?"

"Ranny, I'm not razzing you!" Sylvia shook her head, "and please let's not quarrel tonight. Think—it's the first night in our very own home."

But Ranny's frown deepened. "Sure you're razzing me," he went on, "you're sore because Fay kissed me tonight and you saw it! And let me tell you something right here and now. You won't get very far with me if you're heckling me about things! You're just like all the rest of the married women—you think you can make a man over by giving him hell-Columbia, every time he does something you don't like. But you can't! You just make him hate you——"

And with a nod of his fine blond head he disappeared into the bathroom with a Turkish towel over his shoulder. A moment later there came the splashing sound of the shower and above it his voice singing, "I've Been Working on the Railroad," very loudly and cheerfully.

Sylvia turned down his bed, climbed into her own and pretended to be asleep when he came back into the room. She felt his eyes on her face for a minute or two, and she hoped with all her heart that he would come and kiss her good night.

Then she could put her arms around his neck and tell him that she loved him and hadn't meant to "razz" him, and the quarrel would be over.

She waited for his breath on her face, and his hands on her shoulders.

Then she heard the click of the reading lamp on the table between the two beds as he switched the light off.

She lay awake listening to the sound of Ranny's measured breathing until she heard a clock somewhere across the roofs of the town, strike two—then three—then four.

Against the darkness of the bedroom two figures seemed to dance before her wide-open eyes. The figure of a man and a slim girl, locked together in an embrace—Fay and Ranny.

She tried to shut the sight out of her mind, but it would not be shut out.

Finally, toward five o'clock, Sylvia got up, put on her slippers and bathrobe and went into the living room.

"If I'm going to spend a 'white night,' I may as well spend it reading," she told herself impatiently, and opened a book.

She tried to read, but between her eyes and the printed pages two figures seemed to dance once more—Fay and Ranny, their faces pressed close to each other.

On the table behind the davenport was a photograph of him—an enlargement of a snapshot that Sylvia had taken more than a year ago. It showed him in tennis clothes, with a racket under his arm.

He picked it up, looking at it closely

How much better looking he was than other men, she thought. No wonder that girls made fools of themselves over him. They always would probably.

"And I just won't be jealous! I just won't let myself be jealous of him!" Sylvia told herself. "He must care more for me than for any other girl he's ever seen or he wouldn't have married me. That's certain!"

Hugging that comforting thought to her bosom, she tiptoed into the bathroom to bathe and dress for the day.

But it was only a few days later that she began to wonder if Ranny really did care so very much for her.

It was Saturday night, at half past seven.

They had finished Sylvia's dinner of steak and fried potatoes and tomato salad and were settled down for the evening

Ranny rustled the pages of the paper as he lay, stretched out in his long chair under the lamp. Three feet away, in her little rocker, Sylvia was crying over the last pages of a heart breaking story.

She realized suddenly that Ranny was yawning and stretching himself.

"What's the matter—sleepy?" she asked, looking up at him.

He shook his head and pulled out his watch, looking down at it thoughtfully.

"No, I just feel sort-a dopey," he answered, with a second yawn. "Do you know, woman, that this is Saturday night? And we're sitting here as if we'd been married a hundred years and were just about ready to drop into our graves."

Sylvia closed her book and laid it on the table.

"Well, what do you want to do? Go to a movies?" she asked.

Instead of answering, he looked gloomier than ever.

Kissing Falls

Sylvia got up and went around to the back of his chair and put her arms around his neck. Then she bent her face down to his and began to cover it with little airy kisses—"butterfly kisses," he called them in the first days of their engagement, a year ago.

A year ago he would have turned in his chair and pulled her down to him if she had done that. But now Sylvia felt him draw away from her ever so slightly.

"What's the matter?" she asked, knowing that she shouldn't ask him that, even while she was doing it. "Do you mind my kissing you, Ranny?"

He laughed. "Well, I've had an awful lot of it the last two or three weeks," he said, and grinned up at her. "You must admit yourself that a person tires of everything when he gets too much of it—even kissing."

Sylvia caught her breath sharply, as she might have done if someone had reached out and given her a sudden blow.

"You didn't seem to mind when Fay kissed you the other night," she

The minute she had said it she knew she had made a mistake.

For Ranny got up, laid his pipe down on the little table beside his chair and stood looking at her.

After a half minute that seemed like a half century, he spoke: "Look here, Sylvy, if I stay here you and I are going to have another row like the one we had the other night. I'm going out for a while."

He turned away, taking off his house coat as he started. In the door way he turned for a parting shot

"We're on each other's nerves—you and I. We've been seeing too much of each other and not enough of other people," he said. "You should have asked someone in to night—some of the old crowd. That's what we have friends for."

He looked as if he were going to say something else. Then, thinking better of it evidently, he turned suddenly and vanished into the bedroom.

Sylvia heard him moving about as he dressed. He was whistling, too, almost under his breath—as if he were glad that he was getting away from her and didn't want her to know how glad he was.

Ranny Bores

Then he came out into the hall and called a number on the telephone

"Hello, Eddie," he said, after a pause "is there a game on to night?"

Sylvia knew then that he was talking to Eddie Carter about the weekly poker game that Eddie and some of his friends had every Saturday in the Back Bay apartment of one of their number. She knew, also, that they played for high stakes—rather higher than a young married man could afford.

She walked out into the hall just as Ranny hung up the receiver.

"Going to play poker?" she asked putting her face up to be kissed before she remembered that Ranny was bored with kisses, for the present.

He nodded. "Yes. Any objections"

"Not an objection in the world," Sylvia answered as airly as Fay her self might have answered that or any other question

As soon as Ranny had lot himself out of the flat she telephoned Fay

"I suppose you're alone, too, to night," she said to her, "at least you're not with Eddie Carter, I know—"

"Yes, I'm alone, and as blue as the ocean," Fay answered her. "Let's have a poker widows' meeting and go to a movie."

"Let's go for a walk, instead, if you're not afraid of the dark," Sylvia said. "I want to talk to you. I want to ask you something."

She knew that there was no question she could ask about that mystery—the Eternal Masculine—that Fay couldn't answer. Whatever else she was ignorant of, Fay certainly knew men!

(TO BE CONTINUED)

Sylvia and Fay talk over Ranny's escapade. Sylvia decides that something must be done to hold Ranny and decides to give a party with Bone hundred dollars Aunt Agony has given her for a wedding present. Read tomorrow's installment and see what happens.

FAY KING IRATE AT BOYS OF FEMININE CURVES

A LITTLE MORE ACTION AND LESS LOAFING WOULD PUT THESE YOUNG MEN IN SHAPE!
WHILE WOMEN ARE STARVING DOWN TO STRAIGHT LINES - NOTICE LAZY YOUNG MEN ARE CULTIVATING CURVES!
FAY KING

By Fay King

WHILE women are foolishly starving themselves down to points and angles and even letting beauty carvers whittle off extra weight, I notice that young men who ought to be muscular and lean are so lazy and inactive they are taking on soft feminine curves!

There is no more excuse for a young fellow loafing around and taking on flabby fat than there is for a young woman nibbling so little food that her arms look like steel girders and her chest is as flat as a waffle!

The normal and healthy beauty of a young woman calls for curves, and the normal, healthy, well-built of a man should be athletic and firm!

When a young man is too lazy to walk a few blocks and taxies instead of taxing his strength a little, he is bound to take on the unattractive proportions of a young jellyfish!

I do not agree with that saying that "nobody loves a fat man," and it is no crime for an older man to be overplump. It is a crime to see young fellows in their twenties sitting around in rolls of fat.

A young man ought to make it as much his business to cultivate brawn and muscle as a young woman should make it her business to cultivate curves and plumpness!

A "boyish form" on a girl has about as much appeal to a man as soft feminine curves on a man would have for a woman!

We hear a lot about sex appeal these days. The stage, the screen and fiction are filled with it. I sometimes think one reason we talk and think about it so much these days is because there is so little real healthy sex appeal in physical appearance!

Healthy normal men and women don't waste time analyzing sex appeal! They meet, are attracted to one another, marry, and live happy, healthy, normal lives together!

I never see or hear any good big fine looking healthy truck drivers and good, clean, rosy cheeked, healthy, girls wasting their time arguing and debating about free love and psychoanalysis!

Be healthy and you will be normal and happy!

Don't let some fashion artist's pen pictures of women as shallow as a wave and weird as a shrimp and try to starve and train down to those illustrations!

The fashion artist herself is probably as plump as an overstuffed chair

Anybody can get by in a dress suit or a ball gown. It's how you look in your bath that counts!

Heard in the Home

By L. Lamar Matthews

SUSAN CHUMLEY was practically ostracised at school.

One of the teachers had overheard Susan telling a group of other little girls a questionable story. Then the teacher, being of old-fashioned Puritan stock, thought the child deserved the deepest humiliation, and proceeded to lecture her before her schoolmates. After that the other children pulled their skirts aside when they passed her.

"Where did you ever hear such a story," demanded the teacher. Susan would not reply. She also refused to divulge the source of her information to the school principal. Finally she principal called Mrs. Chumley into conference.

"Where ever did you hear it," cried the mother angrily, when she reached home.

Then Susan raised her head and looked her mother straight in the eye. "I heard you telling it to Daddy," the child answered. "I didn't know it was so terrible, or I would not have said it."

There you are. She heard her mother telling something which, when repeated by a child, brought condemnation upon her.

Parents may imagine they can indulge in questionable language and still keep their children clean and innocent; but they are dead wrong. Children know whether the atmosphere of a home is clean or unclean They have a sense of sixth sense which enables them to get impressions without knowing exactly how they got them

The only homes that send forth pure-minded, wholesome children are those whose parents are pure-minded. It is for the mother and father to say just what manner of young ones they will send forth into the world to represent the family standard

Advice to Lovelorn

By Beatrice Fairfax

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

I have been going about with a girl for about one year. We are in formally engaged and expect to marry in the Spring

Last May she moved to the country. There she has been going out with a young man who, after saying good night" to his sweetheart, takes my fiancee out in his car. They stay out until 2 or 3 in the morning.

I paid her a visit and was told about this. But I forgave her, and she promised she would never go out or see him again. In her letters she told me she never bothered with him or saw him

Last week-end I paid her another visit and found she had been out with him as much as ever

It hurts me, as I am very much in love with her. Shall I give her up?

A. A.

SINCE your fiances so lightly disregards your happiness now, do you think she is likely to make you happy later on?

You would be entirely justified in breaking your engagement under the circumstances I suggest that you consider very carefully whether you can reasonably hope for happiness if you marry a girl whose promise you cannot trust.

DO YOU KNOW THAT—

The origin of heraldic arms is by general consent attributed to the necessity which arose during the Crusades of distinguishing the leaders of the numerous bands of warriors which constituted the Christian armies.

It blea numbering over 10 000 000 were issued last year by the British and Foreign Bible Society

A Line on Lamb

GREETINGS, everybody!

"Lamb chops, 50c. Lamb frank for stew [illegible] pound 3 pounds for a quarter. was the first thing that met my eye the instant I stepped off the escalator this morning and I wondered how many of you are taking advantage of the drop in lamb prices?

The delicacy of lamb, combined with [illegible] makes it one of the best buys [illegible]

Don't [illegible] lamb by any means [illegible] little uneconomical leg of [illegible] which certainly is delicious in combination with parsley, potatoes, jellied tomato salad and fruit tapioca.

Other Cuts

But there are many other cuts [illegible] equally as satisfactory. Few people realize how delicious a roast lamb flank. The bone is small and the meaty portion is just enough streaked with fat to make it tender and tasty.

Roast or braised lamb shanks are being served in many restaurants and hotels in individual portions and the inexpensiveness of this roast makes the busy housekeeper [illegible] scalloped potatoes, string beans, lettuce and tomato salad and cottage pudding completes the roast shank dinner,

Lamb shoulder is roasted with the bone out or else boned and rolled. If the whole shoulder is bought, cut two or three meaty chops from either the rib or shank side.

In all lamb cookery be sure to remove the outer skin cover which is tough and often contains oil from the wool. With the roast lamb shoulder try glazed potatoes, jellied cole slaw and apricot whip

Tender and Tasty

While lamb rib is generally cut into chops, it makes a wonderfully tender and tasty roast and bought in one piece the price is not as high as that charged for chops. Curried rice, stewed celery and fruit cobbler [illegible] meal.

A [illegible] roast is tender, delicious [illegible] served with caper sauce, [illegible] scalloped tomatoes, pineapple and cabbage salad and grape juice blanc mange it makes a meal "fit for a king."

Most of us have used lamb breast for stew, but perhaps not as a roast. It is similar to short ribs of beef and is [illegible] and easily—but inexpensive and tasty. Try it with browned potatoes, baked apples, vegetable salad and prune whip

The fore quarter may be easily boned and made into a compact roll. Your butcher will gladly do it for you. Try it with Hungarian potatoes, stewed celery and blueberry cobbler.

A crown roast with Franconia potatoes, shoestring carrots, lettuce and [illegible] en chevrette makes a scrumptious Sunday dinner and a roast saddle for holiday occasions is a dish for an epicure.

Here's a list of just a few of the left-over dishes that can be made from lamb remnants lamb souffle, lamb patties, curried lamb, creamed lamb in pastry shells, hot lamb sandwiches, casserole of lamb, ragout of lamb, lamb croquettes, lamb pot pie, Spanish lamb, lamb stew, lamb shortcake, lamb surprise, scrambled lamb and Scotch broth

Don't make the mistake of overcooking lamb. When roasted the meat may be [illegible] boned and rolled. If the whole shoulder is bought, cut two or three meaty chops from either the rib or shank side.

In all lamb cookery be sure to remove the outer skin cover which is tough and often contains oil from the wool. With the roast lamb shoulder try glazed potatoes, jellied cole slaw and apricot whip

Tender and Tasty

While lamb rib is generally cut into chops, it makes a wonderfully tender and tasty roast and bought in one piece the price is not as high

Try your lamb dishes with caper, chutney, curry powder and mint. Write me for full directions for making any of the dishes I have suggested. If you like these meat chats, give me the high sign for more

Bye till tomorrow!

BOBBIE AND HIS PA

By William F. Kirk

THIS A. M. when we was all eeting brekfust Pa kep grinning all the time. Ma seen it & she must of thinked it was quear. I know I thot it was quear because Pa is nearly always grouchy in the A. M.

But what is anewsing you so much this morning? sed Ma.

Nothing speshul, sed Pa. I merely happen to feel in a good heamor, sed Pa, at peace with all the wurld, & beakaus I show it you think I am grumpel. At that, sed Pa, I supose a guy is grumpel to be at peace with all the wurld.

Not at all, deer, sed Ma. I think it is perfeckly darling of you to wake up smiling.

For hevings sakks, sed Pa, donut say Perfeckly Darling wen you are speaking of me.

There goes the smile, Bobbie, sed Ma, it didest feel at hoam on yure deer father's face so it is running out of the door, sed Ma. Maybe if you run after it you can catch it, Bobbie, sed Ma. Wen a man wants to be cheerful you wont let him, sed Pa.

Of course I will let you be cheerful, sed Ma, only of course I was sort of stunned for a Moment, sed Ma. This is the first time I haf seen you smile at the brekfust tabel since the first year of our happy marriage, sed Ma.

Doant I mostly always smile at brekfust? sed Pa.

Indeed you do not, sed Ma, you mostly always set down to brekfust with a look on yure face like the Prisoner of Chilon or Sir Walter Rawly on his wap to the chopping block, sed Ma.

Well, well, well, sed Pa. I had no idee I was letting myself git to be a Gloom, sed Pa. I will haf to smile every morning after this, sed Pa. If it make you so happy. I will smile seven tho my hart be braking, sed Pa. Pass the pancakes, Bobbie, sed Pa.

I think it wud be a lots better wurld in wich to live in if all of us lerned to grin moar, sum peopul think grins is silly but B-leeve me, the silliest thing in this wurld is a skowling face, did you ever notis the face of a angle wurm, it never smiles & it never lafs, & a angle wurm is certingly silly, look at how often it gits hooked, where, any time. It rather cramps his style.

"At love making"?

"Oh, mommy, I am going to lose my temper with you in a minute. There is so much in th a world besides sex. But you older women don't know it. You've never read Freud. You think inhibition is prohibition mispronounced. Clarence and I have no urge toward each other. We're intelectual companions."

"Then, why, may I ask, can't you sit here this evening and discuss learned topics of interest instead of going to a vulgar road house? That's just what Jessops amounts to, a common road house."

"Everyone goes. They have the best little orchestra west of Cincinnati."

Want a Thrill

"Everyone? That isn't true. The girls who go there want a thrill, excitement. And no daughter of mine is going anywhere with a married man for her escort. Clarence Haldron is amusing himself with you. You talk in a lofty manner of intelectual companionship — it's boring, my dear, and the oldest trge of life is setting birds to build nests and young people to stroll two by two through numerous lovers' lanes. The man's wife left him because of another woman. And immediately he dropped the other woman. Why? Because he found out that you flighty headed girls considered him elegible because he has a fine car and money to waste on you. Now you telephone him that you can't go tonight!"

So Elaine went to the telephone and pretended to break her engagement. Then she sauntered back. "Now that I have an open evening, I'll run over to Betty Malone's and see whether or not I can take her date away from her." She went up-stairs and painted and powdered and lipsticked herself and called quietly over the telephone extension in her room, telling Clarence Haldron that she would meet him at Jessops.

Down the steps she ran presently, the jaunty cape of her sport suit flaring out from her lithe, strong young figure. She had never before attempted to deceive her mother. And her mother trusted her although she had been called upon to warn her. Clarence Haldron had been bringing her home from too many parties and finding excuses to tarry at the house.

Elaine was not as joyous as she looked when she told her mother good-bye. Once in her car, she decided to treat the whole affair as a lark—her one disobedient act—and tell her mother all about it as soon as she came home. No heavy conscience to keep her from beauty sleep.

Spireas were breaking into fairy like lace along the great estates she passed. Here and there late forsythias were shaking their yellow bells in the warm Spring breeze. Tulips flamed along driveways and everywhere the trees were tossing branches plumed with budding green.

Clarence Haldron was a good sport, she ruminated. A misunderstood man. His wife was a jealous cat. They simply could not make a go of it. Why shouldn't he have supper and a nice chat with a congenial soul once in a while? Why, indeed!

Car Stopped

A loud cracking noise made Elaine jerk one hand off of the wheel in sudden fright. The car careened drunkenly to the side of the road. The engine gasped and died. She pushed and jabbed this and that. Hopped out and raised the hood with an intelligent air, although truth to tell she did not know one part from the other.

"Come right in, honey, and telephone for help. It would be a shame to spoil your pretty dress trying to fix whatever is broken."

Elaine looked up. A darling little old lady with snowy hair, a white face fichu fastened with a cameo, a rustling taffeta dress, was there before her. She was simply too good to be true.

"Are you real? You look like an ideal grandmother in a movie!" said Elaine admiringly, running up to the quaint figure. Then glancing toward a rambling white house set back under tall trees—"I think that I must be on location. The setting —you—it's far too perfect to be real."

Elaine telephoned for a mechanician. He said that he would be there within twenty minutes, but the old-fashioned clock on the mantel ticked away an hour before he arrived and in the meantime Elaine was learning about life, learning it at first hand.

A lovely woman about thirty-five was lying on a couch before a log fire. The little old lady gave her own name as Elkins and "This," she said, indicating the figure in the flesh colored negligee, "is my god child, Helen. Helen isn't well, but she's going to be. Soon."

Helen smiled and looked admiringly at Elaine's stylish, well set up body. "How chic you are! Clarence always liked me in sport clothes—but after my baby came and died—I think that was when our trouble began. I didn't want to wear sport clothes and run around, and men, you know, are over things like—like loving a little baby—better than women do."

Testing Helen

Something somersaulted right in Elaine's breast. She knew, instinctively who the woman was before Grandma Elkins spoke again. "You have met Helen's husband, Clarence Haldron. He's going around to young folks' parties, we hear. He doesn't know that Helen is here with me. I went all the way to Florida to get her. And some day, he's coming right up that driveway, glad to be with her once more. The Lord's just testing Helen, I tell her. Testing her for her good."

For her good! Elaine looked at the pale face, the wistful eyes. Right away Elaine made up her mind to be the Lord's chief assistant in that case.

When her car had been made ready, Elaine headed straight for Jessop's. She drove like the wind. Clarence Haldron ran out to meet her.

"Jump in!" she summoned him. "I want to take you for a little run."

"But I've ordered supper—they're cooking mushrooms under glass."

"Mushrooms," repeated Elaine, mean nothing in my young life."

"Why this seriousness, Elaine, my dear?" He laid a hand over hers on the wheel. "You worry me. I don't seem to understand this wild drive you're taking me on. And I've been happy to believe that you and I were entirely, shall I say, sympatico? You are the one woman who understands me."

"Any woman could," remarked Elaine bitingly, "who would take the trouble to know you at all."

Bound to Miss Him

The white house under the tasseled trees flashed across their sight. He turned his head slightly and rolled up his coat collar as if he felt a sudden chill. She slowed down at the big gate. "Helen Haldron is in there sick, broken-hearted, waiting for you to come. If you don't go in and do what's right, I hope you'll wrap out a curse barn and shoot yourself. Sympatico, not with me!"

"Helen? My wife?" A light flashed into his brown eyes. "In there, really! Watching for me! Well, I'll be doggoned!"

Elaine stepped on the gas and was off. For a second she could not see the white winding ribbon of a road with green gossamer boughs overhead, for the tears that streamed down her face. Clarence Haldron had a way with him. She was bound to miss him.

DAILY SHORT STORY

"I JUST won't be disrespectful or duty you—as many girls treat their mothers. But I'm not willing to have you outline my life for me—select my friends—mould my thoughts! This is the twentieth century. We have to move with the times. Nowadays girls think! Express their own personality and individuality in the way they dress, talk, live.

"The idea of telling me that association with Clarence Haldron is bad for me! He's the only real man in this town. He's lived—knows interesting things about interesting people and places. He's a 'cosmopolitan.'

"But he's married, Elaine! You can't ignore conventionality. Public opinion must be respected.

On Knees of the Gods.

"Public opinion! Pittle, darling! Our destiny is on the knees of the gods. They may sneeze any minute and allow us to slide right off."

"How can you be so trivial about tragedy?"

"In preparation for divorce a tragedy? Is divorce a tragedy? Only when you can't get enough alimony! Now, Clarence is willing to give his wife all the money she wants. All he longs for is freedom."

"For what?" asked Mrs. Meyers calmly. She was not the least bit awed by her modern young daughter.

"Oh, well, just that! Freedom! It isn't exactly pleasant to know that your wife may pop up anywhere, any time. It rather cramps his style."

"At love making"?

"Oh, mommy, I am going to lose my temper with you in a minute. There is so much in th a world besides sex. But you older women don't know it. You've never read Freud. You think inhibition is prohibition mispronounced. Clarence and I have no urge toward each other. We're intelectual companions."

"Then, why, may I ask, can't you sit here this evening and discuss learned topics of interest instead of going to a vulgar road house? That's just what Jessops amounts to, a common road house."

"Everyone goes. They have the best little orchestra west of Cincinnati."

Want a Thrill

"Everyone? That isn't true. The girls who go there want a thrill, excitement. And no daughter of mine is going anywhere with a married man for her escort. Clarence Haldron is amusing himself with you. You talk in a lofty manner of intelectual companionship — it's boring, my dear, and the oldest trge of life is setting birds to build nests and young people to stroll two by two through numerous lovers' lanes. The man's wife left him because of another woman. And immediately he dropped the other woman. Why? Because he found out that you flighty headed girls considered him elegible because he has a fine car and money to waste on you. Now you telephone him that you can't go tonight!"

So Elaine went to the telephone and pretended to break her engagement. Then she sauntered back. "Now that I have an open evening, I'll run over to Betty Malone's and see whether or not I can take her date away from her." She went up-stairs and painted and powdered and lipsticked herself and called quietly over the telephone extension in her room, telling Clarence Haldron that she would meet him at Jessops.

Down the steps she ran presently, the jaunty cape of her sport suit flaring out from her lithe, strong young figure. She had never before attempted to deceive her mother. And her mother trusted her although she had been called upon to warn her. Clarence Haldron had been bringing her home from too many parties and finding excuses to tarry at the house.

Elaine was not as joyous as she looked when she told her mother good-bye. Once in her car, she decided to treat the whole affair as a lark—her one disobedient act—and tell her mother all about it as soon as she came home. No heavy conscience to keep her from beauty sleep.

FOXY GRANDPA'S BEDTIME STORY

By Foxy Grandpa

"DO you know," said Bobby, as we travelled north in India toward the Himalaya Mountains, "that before I came to India I thought it was always hot. I never thought of snow in India at all."

We travelled for days and finally reached the Himalaya Mountains.

My brother and sister was singing "Bobby Shaftoe's Gone to Sea." They had come to a line which read "Combing down his yellow hair," and the little boy suddenly remarked, "It is not yellow hair, it is curly hair."

LUCKY TIGER

We got up to a place where there was snow—even if it was Summer in a hot country. When Bobby sat down to rest while we were getting our breaths he said:

"I think I've changed my mind about being a mountain-climber, Foxy Grandpa. It's pretty hard work, isn't it? I think I'd like it better on horseback."

We were waiting there for a little while before going down, because, you know, it is just as hard to go down a steep mountain as it is to go up. Then Bunny suddenly sat up on his hind legs, and I've never seen his ears so stiff or his whiskers bristle so. I knew at once he had seen something.

He gave me a quick look, said nothing, but indicated to the right with his eyes. Bobby and I remained as still as two cigar store Indians. We breathed so quietly that you wouldn't have known we were breathing. You have to do that when you are hunting, you know. Because animals can hear you breathing at quite a distance.

Then we saw it. And what a beautiful animal it was! It had very light fur with beautiful spots on it. And how thick the fur was, and its tail was as bushy as a Persian cat's.

We watched it for a moment and then it saw us. It didn't make any effort to attack us at all. On the contrary, it was very much frightened and went bounding up the snowy side of the mountain as easily as Bunny runs along a flat road.

"What was it?" I asked.

"An ounce," said Bunny, "or snow leopard. We were very fortunate. Few people see these fellows, and very little is known about their habits."

"Why do they call them snow leopards?" asked Bobby.

"Because they only live in the snow," said Bunny, "and often in the Summer they will climb up to a height of 18,000 feet and live there in the snow."

FINANCE

By B. C. Forbes

Mergers will go on. They will go on in railroads, in industrial enterprises, in public utilities, in mercantile establishments, in all lines of business. The Interstate Commerce Commission's Nickel Plate ruling will encourage, not discourage railway consolidations.

What is the real meaning of the commission's pronouncement?

Most important of all, the commission has announced definitely that it will not insist upon the re-grouping of our railway systems along the lines of the theoretical plan sponsored by it. In other words, the commission is ready to approve any merger plan which it regards as advantageous from the transportation point of view, provided financial terms acceptable to the security holders concerned are offered.

This removes what heretofore has been most uncertain in the minds of railroad and financial interests.

* * *

More. The commission has decreed that the proposed Nickel Plate grouping is in the public interest. To have won such a verdict is three-quarters of the victory aimed at by the Van Sweringens.

All that remains to be done is to remove the objections of certain Chesapeake and Ohio and Hocking Valley stockholders.

Had the commission ruled that no consolidations not in accordance with its own theoretical plans would be considered or approved, then there would have been profound reason for bitter disappointment throughout the railway and financial world. This would have meant the abandonment of practically every railway merger negotiation now under way or in prospect. It would have meant that a state of uncertainty and anxiety would have prevailed until Congress had thrashed out the whole subject of voluntary and compulsory consolidations.

* * *

No matter how you may feel about the business outlook or the stock market outlook, be assured that in the highest circles the emphatic conclusion is that mergers will go on.

OIL OUTPUT IS TO UNDERGO REVISION

In this column last Feb. 18 we printed an article under the headline "Oil Output to Sad Need of Revision." We stated in part:

"That present oil output methods are in sad need of revision is the belief of many higher up in the industry. Attacking the industry's failing to give 'proper recognition' to oil requirements for national defense, 'When production is put on a sensible, sane, business basis we will insure an oil supply for future needs,' Mr. Doherty declares."

A Washington dispatch now states:

"Convinced that the country's petroleum supply is near exhaustion, the Federal Oil Conservation Board is preparing to recommend to President Coolidge a drastic policy of conservation, it is learned. The principal feature it is understood, will be regulation of production to eliminate the wasteful methods responsible for the loss of millions of barrels of oil annually.

WHY WALL STREET IS BULLISH ON THE OILS

One reason why Wall street is bullish on the oils is that the stocks have not participated to any extent in the recent rise and the fact that a number of companies reported large earnings for 1925. The Phillips Petroleum Company, for instance, shows increases in net earnings of approximately $10,000,000 over 1924. At the same time oil prices are showing a tendency to harden, and production shows a decline compared with 1925. The Standard Oil interests, it is learned, are bullish on the oils because of the increasing use of gasoline. Earnings of the oil companies this year are expected to show a good increase over 1926—a record year for the petroleum industry.

SWIFT SELLS AT NEW 1926 HIGH IN BOSTON

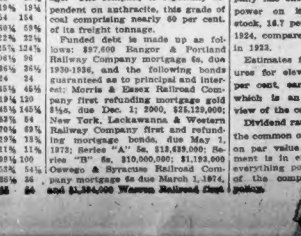
Selling at an advance of ⅝ to 117, Swift & Co. shares were at the year's best and within three points of the 1925 highest, reached only a year ago this time. The stock is carrying the latest $2 quarterly dividend, which is deducted from the market price Wednesday. Swift & Co. recently is selling to yield about 7 per cent., which is rather an attractive return during this period of easy money rates considering the company's splendid record of many years. Since 1923 Swift & Co. has made a steady come-back, and President Swift looks for satisfactory business this year.

Cotton Is Steady

New York cotton futures were steady. Prices:—March 19.90; May 19.70; July 18.08; October 17.84; December 17.01.

Liberty Bond Prices

Liberty bond quotations: 1st 4¼s, 103.16; 2nd 4¼s, 100.36; 3rd 4¼s, 101.6; 4th 4¼s, 102.18; new 4¼s, 107.32; new 4s, 104.11.



Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad Company's main line covers a route from New York via Binghamton to Buffalo, N. Y., and with branches totals 760 miles of trackage. The company is specially dependent on anthracite, this grade of coal comprising nearly 60 per cent. of its freight tonnage.

Funded debt is made up as follows: $57,000 Hanger & Portland Railway Company mortgage 6s, due 1930-1936, and the following bonds guaranteed as to principal and interest: New York, Lackawanna & Western Railway Company first and refunding mortgage bonds, due May 1, 1973; Series "A" 5s, $12,639,000; Series "B" 5s, $10,000,000; $1,193,000 Oswego & Syracuse Railroad Company mortgage 6s due March 1, 1874, and $1,304,000 Western Railroad Company refunding mortgage gold 4½s, due August 1, 2000.

Capital stock consists of $87,377,000 authorized and outstanding "capital" stock, par value $50. The company has shown consistent earning power on its common or capital stock, 16.7 per cent. being earned in 1924, compared with 14.66 per cent. in 1923.

Estimates for 1925 based on figures for eleven months show 16.3 per cent. earned on capital stock, which is an excellent showing in view of the coal strike situation.

Dividend rate is now $6 a share on the common or at a 12 per cent. rate on par value of the stock. Equipment is in excellent condition and everything points to a continuance of the company's liberal dividend policy.

RICH VEIN AID FOR QUINCY

Houghton, Mich., March 9.—The rich vein of copper opened in Quincy has been cut in five different places in Nos. 4 and 6 shafts, according to admission by the management. Four of these are around the 86th level in No. 2 and the other in at the 83rd level of No. 6 shaft, 1,600 feet away, which is the longest distance between openings. In No. 2, the vein has been opened for 125 feet in one place and at another, on the opposite or south side of the shaft, 500 feet away, for 20 feet. It also has been cut 80 feet above and 50 feet below the original point of contact. The average width appears to be 10 feet.

While it is called a "new" vein, it is in reality the old Pewable lode, of the Pewable belt series, which has carried no values heretofore. The vein matter is a dark green epidote, different from anything the Quincy has encountered anywhere in its mine. The rock is impregnated with heavy copper and should run very high in values, it is said. It is, however, cannot be made until the vein is more extensively opened laterally and at depth.

The sudden enrichment of the old Pewable, if the copper content persists, will be highly important to Quincy as this mineralization is in addition to the values Quincy already has in the main Pewable vein which has been found as rich in the bottom level of No. 2 as in the upper reaches. It is expected that opening work will be vigorously followed in the "new" vein to reasonably determine, as soon as possible, its permanency.

HARVARD SERVICE SEES NO BEAR MARKET SIGN

Harvard Economic Service, dis-cussing the stock markets in its latest weekly letter, says:

"It must be recognized that the Federal Reserve Board stimulated the upward movement of stocks in 1924 and 1925 have largely spent their force. The index of 20 stocks, the general average of the prices of industrials was at a figure which seems to have discounted the benefits of a long continued period of prosperity, and money conditions have become distinctly firmer since the Autumn of 1925.

"Nevertheless, the present level of interest rates is moderate, and the general money and credit situation as such that the present quotations for stocks will probably prove to be another intermediate movement, similar to those in the Autumn of 1923 and 1924. Certainly, further changes in money conditions, of a very unfavorable character, are necessary to warrant the conclusion that the present decline of industrial stock prices is the beginning of a major downward movement, such as normally precedes a major decline in business."

THOUSANDS OF HUB CATHOLICS AT NOVENAS

By JAMES WALSH.

More than 40,000 persons are at-tending novena of grace services in honor of St. Francis Xavier, held several times daily in the three Jesuit churches of the city. At the Church of the Holy Trinity, Shawmut avenue and Cobb street, South End, hundreds of people whose business is in that part of the city attend the special services at noon. At St. Mary's, North End, the upper and lower churches are thronged at the services during the day and evening. At the Church of the Immaculate Conception, Harrison avenue and East Concord street, where seven services are held during the day, it is estimated that more than 15,000 take part. The novenas will end March 12.

Mr. Pleasant Court No. 20, M. C. O. F., will hold a large class initiation and entertainment in Longfellow Hall, Intercolonial Building, Roxbury, tomorrow night. It is expected that High Chief Ranger John H. O'Hara of Salem will be present to officiate at the initiation ceremonies. One of the features of the concert will be a fiddlers' contest. Other guests besides the high chief ranger of the order are: State Councillor George E. Curran, former Fire Commissioner Theodore A. Glynn, Judge Joseph A. Sheahan, Deputy High Chief Ranger John J. Russell, the Rev. J. J. Phelan, chaplain of the court; Senator William J. Foley and members of the high standing committee.

The committee in charge of the affair are Chief Ranger William J. Barry, Edward G. Graham, Felix F. Carroll, John J. O'Brien, Michael S. Drew, Garrett H. Keefe, John Barr, Daniel P. O'Connor, David O'Brien, Edward F. O'Neil, John F. Monahan and John J. Adams.

Good Will the Great Need of United States and Mexico

Both the United States and Mexico, through appropriate official as well as through many unofficial channels, have expressed friendship and confidence toward each other.

The better opinion in both countries accepts these expressions with gratification and hopes sincerely that such friendship will always continue.

It is obviously incumbent on this nation, as the richer and stronger, to exercise that forbearance which good will dictates, especially in view of the many difficulties inherent in the mutual relations.

The border which divides these nations is not, like the northern border of the United States, a line of demarcation between peoples speaking one language and possessing similar institutions, customs and habits of thought.

It represents instead distinctly different types of culture. Among many on both sides those differences are not understood or are understood imperfectly.

In such a situation the policy of prudence for both peoples is to emphasize the factors which make for better understanding and cordial friendship rather than the factors which excite opposite feelings.

Hasty judgments resting on inadequate knowledge are the source of most of the frictions of the past.

The present Government in Mexico asserts its will to examine with open mind all points of controversy and to go to the limit of its power in resolving them in a manner to promote cordiality.

That spirit will not lack reciprocation in the United States.

It is gratifying in this connection to hear from Senator Borah, chairman of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations, that the official correspondence between the two governments, which the Senate has just requested, will not increase but will tend to relieve whatever tension exists in the public thought.

Not how to magnify differences, but how to promote understanding, good will and fair relations of industry and commerce is today the outstanding duty of statesmanship, whether north or south of the Rio Grande.

Rebellion Means Progress

The Interesting Executioner

Public executioners are interesting perhaps because the wise realize that only the grace of God has saved them from more intimate acquaintance with such gentlemen.

William Christopher Patterson dies aged eighty-four, killing fifty-four men and women by the rope and electric chair.

He had the honor of killing the first woman that ever died in the electric chair. Asked whether innocent men were ever executed, old Patterson replied: "It is a good law of life to mind your own business. I was not employed at Auburn Prison as a judge."

Another and better law of life is to be your own judge and refuse to do what you know you ought not to do. The world's progress is due to men that have refused to submit to the accepted order of things, from the earliest rebel against some ancient tyrant to the men that signed the Declaration of Independence.

Bryan's Last Plan

One More Constitutional Strife

Augustus Thomas, playwright, who nominated W. J. Bryan for the Presidency in 1908, has seen an amendment to the Constitution prepared by Mr. Bryan just before he died. Under that amendment this country would be declared officially a Christian nation, and the amendment would have provided for legislation against every freethinker, Jew, Mohammedan or man of other faith in the country.

As things stand now this nation has NO official religion. That fact was utilized by Thomas Jefferson in his dealings with the Sultan of Morocco. The Mohammedan Sultan would not make a treaty with any Christian nation. He despised Christianity. Jefferson said in substance, "Don't let that worry you, this isn't a Christian nation."

It would have been interesting had Mr. Bryan lived to submit his Constitutional amendment to the people. He would have learned something.

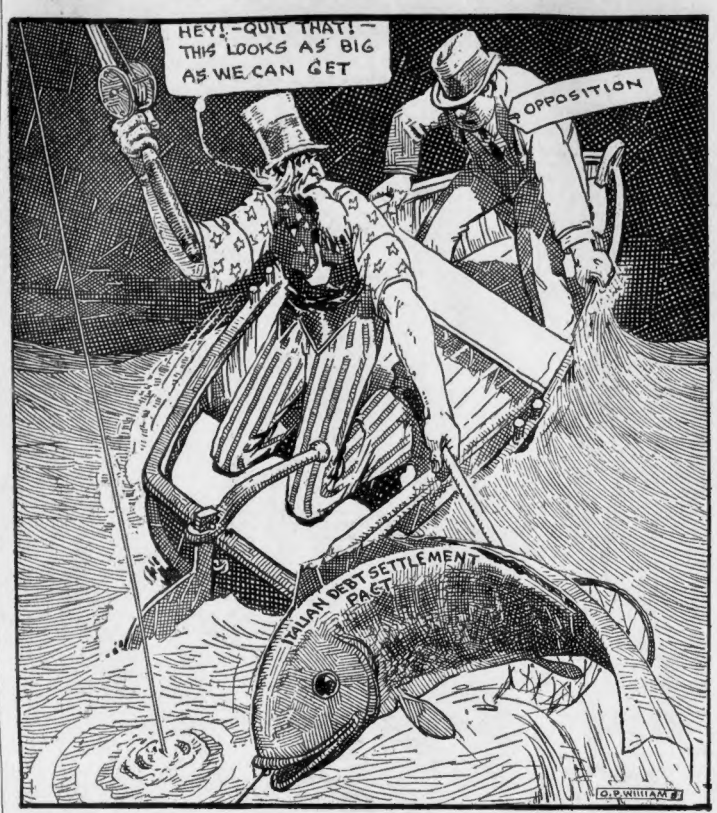
Hard Shipping

Europe Means to Rule the Waves

W. A. Harriman thought he would do in shipping what his father had done in railroading. He has discovered that Europe's shipping, led by Britain, rules the waves.

When he sent ships to Egypt, the British told him that he would not carry a pound of Egyptian cotton, and he never did. Now he learns that German directors of the Hamburg-American Line "no longer desire his participation." He will sell out his interest there.

Don't Rock the Boat



MEASURED by its capacity to pay, Italy's proffer is as generous as that of any of the debtor nations with which settlements have been made.

Italy has never questioned or sought to shirk the debt. She has had no part in the propaganda to get this country to cancel its just claims.

Her offer, made in good faith, goes as far as she can go; our holding out for more would create ill-will with no offsetting gain.

That being admitted, why vex the negotiations with extraneous matters?

MEDBURY SAYS—

By John P. Medbury

SINCE etiquette courses have come down in price, thousands of people are becoming ladies and gentlemen by mail.

GOOD breeding now comes in envelopes.

COMMON people are able to get refinement by special delivery.

ONE man learned that he should get up and give his seat to a lady in the street car, but so far he hasn't been able to get a seat.

HE can pick up a magazine and in less than ten minutes "Tell what's wrong with the pictures."

AFTER reading the book he went home and acted like a gentleman. His wife said he gave a wonderful impersonation.

HE asked friends in in the evening so that he could practice how to say good-bye to them.

AT dinner he only set the table with knives and spoons so that he couldn't make a mistake and use the wrong fork.

HE didn't even know which spoon to leave in his coffee cup.

HE figured he'd be on the safe side, so he put it in his pocket.

LISTEN, WORLD!

Reg. U. S. Patent Office

By Elsie Robinson

YOUR house is swept. The dishes on your shelf are spotless clean. The sunlight lies across your threshold in a flawless golden band. But—

There's a shadow on another's door. And there's a cluttered corner in another's house that may breed sickness unless of your mercy you shall clean it with your pitying hands.

This is the story of that shadow on another's door. It is a true story; it is not printed—that it may make sensational news. It is printed that the pity of it may open the springs of mercy in your own heart, and that out of your compassion may come a healing of all such misery throughout the world.

I will not give the poor, halting, shamed words with which she approached her confidence. Only my heart aches that we should have made it so hard for any one to come to us for help.

Loves Her Family

"Elsie," she writes, "I have only loved once in the twenty-three years of my life. I never even had a school girl affair, and the man I married is the only man I ever loved or ever will. I am English and he is Italian. My parents opposed our going together and so did my so-called friends. The more any one was against us the more I cared for him. But because of the opposition I kept postponing our marriage, for somehow I was afraid, and then, Elsie, five months after our marriage our baby was born.

"Elsie, when I look at its sweet little face and faultless body, it seems to me that we did not sin.

"Tell me, Elsie, dear, did we?

"Oh, what I've had to contend with no one realizes, and I've had not a soul to go to for a little comfort, except scraps of help in your column written by some troubled pals.

"JUNE."

Dear little hurt June—listen! In what I am about to say there is no belittling of the importance of marriage. I do not need to explain the necessity of marriage to you.

Burning Affection

For a little while you were selfish, dear. For a little while you forgot his need in your own great desire. But the love that fills your heart now is as much a part of God as any other love. And your baby's birthday was an glad and proud a day as any birthday that has ever made the world a richer, sweeter place.

Nor can the spiteful things that others say, nor the intolerant things that others think, have any hold on you.

So stand up and laugh! YOU AND YOUR LOVE ARE CLEAN! And if the day comes, many years from now, when your boy will ask you how and when he came, do not be afraid. Love builds so wonderfully that nothing you can tell him then will hurt—if you have loved him well enough before that time.

MRS. SOLOMON SAYS—

By Helen Rowland

GO to, my Daughter. Say not unto me, that a damsel cannot be SURE of any man's love!

For beauty may be simulated, and pep may be assumed; but the symptoms of True Love can no more be hidden than the symptoms of hay-fever.

Helen Rowland

Go to. The tongue of a True Lover waggeth not, but aweileth and obstructeth his speech. It forgetteth its "line" and loseth its blithness.

The eyes of a True Lover sleep not, neither do they rove—but remain fixed upon ONE image, and can "see" no other woman.

The heart of a True Lover "misseth" and "knocketh" like unto a disordered engine. It is always in his throat, in his boots, or upon his sleeve.

The knees of a True Lover are never fatigued, and the crease in his trousers is sacrificed with the smile of a martyr.

Yea, verily, verily, the diagnosis of love is a simple thing!

For these, its "symptoms," are plainer to read than an electric sign and they vary not a jot or tittle, while the Lover Fever lasteth!

GREAT STONE FACE OF AMERICA

By DR. FRANK CRANE

NATIONS, like curved mirrors, reflect in magnified proportions the character of the heroes they idealize

Hawthorne, in his story of "The Great Stone Face," with which every schoolboy is familiar, tells of a child who lived in the valley under a titanic figure carved by nature upon the side of the mountain.

It resembled a human countenance and was known as the Great Stone Face.

The boy grew up in the valley, all his life under the influence of the form on the mountainside. In his old age it was recognized that he had grown to be the exact counterpare of the face among the crags.

Great men in a nation's past, whom the citizens are taught to reverence, are the great stone faces of that nation.

Their characters tend to become enlarged to national dimensions.

Whether imaginary or real, such characters are potent.

It has been pointed out that Ulysses, the wandering, colorful hero of the "Odssey," was the great stone face that moulded and shaped the characters of the Greeks.

Napoleon in France, Bismarck and Frederick the Great in Germany, Augustus and Caesar in Italy, have been great stone faces that have left their impress upon the national characteristics of their people.

Often the hero reflects as well as moulds. The type of heroes chosen and the characteristics emphasized tell the ideals of the nation which does the revering.

It is well for a people when their heroes are strong, noble men, when the characteristics emphasized are simple and fundamental.

The Great Stone Face who has had most to do with shaping the character of the people of America is George Washington.

Few men in history have offered better characters for imitation by a young nation fighting its way through hardships of the wilderness to the day of inheriting the promise.

His was the character of the man who doggedly hoes to the end of the row, in whom hardships find the ring o frue steel.

It was the character of a man stern, sincere, uncompromising, purposeful. There is something crag-like, elemental, in his unflinching fidelity to the cause of his country.

His was not the suave, urbane, unctuous, polished character of the courtier; neither is that of the American people.

It was direct, steady, tenacious; so has been that of the people.

It will be well for the nation if, in this day when we have inherited the promise of earlier struggles, the national character still reflects those elements of strength embodied in this Great Stone Face of our past.

BIG PENDULUM GIVES EARTH'S MOVEMENT

By Garrett P. Servlss

Noted Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest.

"I have been looking at a picture of a pendulum suspended from the top of a pit 100 feet deep, and said to prove by the revolution of the bob around a circular card at the bottom of the pit, that the earth rotates on its axis. The experiment is said to be performed at the University of Iowa, but there is absolutely no enlightenment about the way it acts. Won't you kindly let the public in on this interesting experiment?—L. F. H."

WHAT you refer to is a repetition of the famous "Foucault Pendulum Experiment," first exhibited by its inventor under the dome of the Pantheon at Paris in 1851, and for which, as a graphic demonstration of the earth's rotation, Foucault received the Copley medal of the English Royal Society.

The essential apparatus for this most interesting and remarkable experiment, which always excites enthusiastic interest among thoughtful spectators, as a heavy ball pendulum suspended by a long wire in such a way that it is free to swing without restraint in any plane in which it is started. It should be protected against air currents and other sources of disturbance. Such a pendulum once set going will continue to swing in the same plane hour after hour without regard to the motion of the earth.

Not Affected

The consequence of its retention of an unchanged plane of vibration is that while the apparatus as a whole necessarily shares in the earth's rotation, the direction in which the pendulum vibrates is not affected.

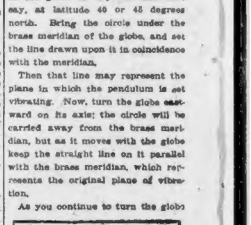
The plane of the pendulum's vibration, however, APPEARS to turn in a right-hand direction (if the experiment is tried in the northern hemisphere), though, IN FACT, it is the earth's surface that turns under the pendulum.

The southern side of any room (in the northern hemisphere) moves eastward, in space, faster than the northern side; if it didn't it could not remain as undisturbed part of the surface of this rotating globe called the earth. Put that in your mental pipe; it makes an excellent smoke.

You can get a graphic representation of what happen with the aid of an ordinary globe Cut out of thin paper a circle an inch or two in diameter. Draw a straight line through the center of the circle. Then attach the circle by a pin through its center to the surface of the globe on any meridian line, say, at latitude 40 or 45 degrees north. Bring the circle under the brass meridian of the globe, and set the line drawn upon it in coincidence with the meridian.

Then that line may represent the plane in which the pendulum is set vibrating. Now, turn the globe eastward on its axis; the circle will be carried away from the brass meridian, but as it moves with the globe keep the straight line on it parallel with the brass meridian, which represents the original plane of vibration.

As you continue to turn the globe



NORTH POLE
EQUATOR
THE PLANE OF THE PENDULUM'S VIBRATION SHIFTS TO THE RIGHT WITH REFERENCE TO THE MERIDIAN OF UNION AS CARRIED ON THE EQUATOR THERE IS NO SHIFT

eastward, all the time adjusting the direction of the line to make it remain parallel with the brass meridian, you will find that the line is turning constantly toward the right, away from the meridian to which it is attached by the pin.

If you continue the experiment until you have carried the circle all around the globe, you will find that the line, i. e., the plan of vibration of the pendulum, has made a circuit around the center of the paper circle.

In the Diagram

The accompanying diagram pictures the affect that you will see.

If the circle is placed on the equator there will be no shift. If it is placed at the pole, the earth's meridians will turn under the plane of vibration making one complete turn in 24 hours.

At any latitude between the pole and the equator the time required for a complete turn of the plane of vibration with reference to the meridian on which the pendulum stands equals 23 hours divided by the sine of the latitude. Thus at 40 degrees latitude the time is about 37 1-3 hours. There is a very good mathematical explanation in Prof. Young's "General Astronomy."

ABOUT AMBITIOUS FOLK OF LOWLY BIRTH

Do you sometimes blame your parents for bringing you into the world under unfavorable circumstances?

You feel that you should have more respected prominent family connections.

Your desire to be above your present surroundings is right, but to put odium on your parents for what you have not personally been able to accomplish, is unkind and shows a shirking disposition.

It is possible for any person to build up a good standing among those who get to know them. It is also possible not to load the same handicap you have had upon the next generation.

Your station in life may be lowly, but it need not be low-lived.

You may not have much money, but you can spend less than you earn.

You can be honest and worthy of respect and eventually you will get it, but you cannot wrest it from the world without intelligent effort on your part.
